EX-GOVERNOR FOLK DEAD

Hemorrhage of Brain Brings Death to Former Executive of State of Missouri.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Former Gov. Joseph W. Folk of Missouri died here this afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. James A. Webb. Death was caused by a hemorrhage of the brain.

Governor Folk had been ill for several months. The widow and Mrs Webb were present at the bedside In addition to these, the surviving relatives are a sister in Helena, Ark., and three brothers in Nashville, Tenn. The body will be taken to Brownsville, Tenn., tonight, and funeral services will be Thursday.

Mr. Folk was a strong supporter and admirer of Bryan in his early campaigns and was in Lincoln in 1914 to attend a Bryan birthday dinner.

Folk was for years one of the most prominent democrats in the country. In 1912 he opposed Champ Clark in the Missouri presidential primaries as democratic candidate for president.

Classed as a progressive, Folk fought himself to public notice by his vigorous cleanup of political corruption in St. Louis when he was prosecutor there between 1900 and 1904.

This graft campaign resulted in his election as governor of Missouri in 1905 and re-election in 1909.

BABY IS CENTER OF FIGHT

GEOFFREY RUSSELL ALONE UNCONCERNED OVER FATE.

House of Lords May Be Called on to Declare Sooner or Later If He Is John Russell's Son.

LONDON, May 28.—Twenty-months-old Geoffrey Russell, now a laughing baby boy, may grow up to hold the spotlight in the sort of legal fight that comes in England once a century, and sometimes lasts for centuries.

Now, in the eyes of the law, Geoffrey Russell is second in the direct line of succession to the barony of Ampthill and a seat in the British house of lords.

But it is that, if he ever succeeds to the title, it will be after a bitter struggle.

The baby's advent into the world caused the Hon. John Hugo Russell, eldest son and heir of Lord Ampthill, to bring suit for divorce against his wife—and Geoffrey's mother—Mrs Christabel Hart Russell, in which he died paternity of the child.

The trial caused a sensation in England and was heavily cabled to the United States. The blood of earls and dukes flows in the veins of the Russels and the present Lord Ampthill, the husband's father, is a former viceroy of India and was at one time secretary to Joseph Chamberlain, the great statesman.

In the first hearing of the divorce suit, two co-respondents were named The jury decided that Mrs. Russell had not misconducted herself with either of them, but disagreed as to whether she had been intimate with an unknown man.

There was an interval of months, and a second trial. In that the jury dismissed a third co-respondent from the suit, but found Mrs. Russell guilty of misconduct with some man unknown.

Costly Litigation.

It was mentioned that the two trials cost over $100,000.

Mrs. Russell's appeal from the decree is now pending, and will cost another $25,000.

Whatever the outcome of the appeal, it is expected to mark merely a new start in the fight to determine whether Geoffrey Russell, if he lives, shall inherit the title of Baron Ampthill.

If Mrs. Russell is successful, the case is regarded as certain to be carried to the house of lords. It is likely to be carried there, too, if the court of appeal upholds the decision of the divorce court.

It is the divorce itself which so far has been the apparent issue. The real issue is whether Geoffrey Russell shall inherit the title.

If a final decree of divorce is granted to John Hugo Russell, Geoffrey will still be, in the eyes of the law, his son. A child born in wedlock is presumed to be legitimate.

Up to House of Lords.

It is thought to be certain that the house of lords must declare, sooner or later, whether Geoffrey Russell, if he lives, is entitled to sit as Baron Ampthill.

There are several possible courses. The first would be for the present Lord Ampthill, father of John Hugo Russell, to seek a declaration that the boy was not his son's. There is some doubt as to whether this could be done. Its advantage would be to have the issue settled at once.

The second would be for John Hugo Russell to have the same declarations made—that he was not the baby's father and that therefore Geoffrey Russell was not his heir.

The third would be to wait until Geoffrey himself applied to the house of lords for admission, after the deaths of the present Lord Ampthill and of his heir, the Hon. John Hugo Russell.

If no steps were taken, he would be presumed to be the heir.

If action were to be deferred until John Hugo Russell's death, other heirs of the family would have to prove Geoffrey illegitimate to keep him from inheriting the title and from the bitterness which the case has aroused, this would be almost certain.

There are innumerable possible complications—for instance that before John Hugo Russell's death, Geoffrey should have grown up, married and himself have had a son and heir.

The baby alone is unconcerned Part of the time he spends in the country, at his grandmother's place The rest of the time he also is in town, and may be seen playing with other young lords, possible or prospective, in Kensington gardens, where one of the principal juvenile sports is to sail toy ships

EDITOR PAYS HIS FINE

Sanders of Memphis Press Announces He Will Not Appeal Finding of the Court.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 28.—G. V. Sanders, editor of the Memphis Press, today paid a fine of $300 in federal court on conviction of contempt growing out of an editorial published last September in which he denounced the Daugherty injunction in the shopmen's strike.

Sanders announcing he would not appeal the case, said:

"The outcome of the case is disappointing in that no way is left open to test the constitutional question of free press. Judge Ross did not touch upon the editor's right to criticize the courts, but merely took exception to the wording of the editorial.

"His finding of fact which hardly would be disturbed by the higher court, would leave very little chance for a reversal. And, if a reversal were obtained, it would not be a vindication but merely a different construction of the facts.

"Judge Ross found that the wording of the editorial in which an injunction was compared to the exercise of the arbitrary power of a king was ridicule of the court and calculated to influence the local court in the trial of the case discussed. This was the case of Jake Cohen, editor of the Memphis Labor Review."

REDS BACK TO OLD CHURCH

Indians to Gather for Mission at Oahe, Northwest of Pierre.

PIERRE, S. D., May 28. — Sixteen miles north and west of Pierre on Peoria bottom along the Missouri river is situated Oahe, a postoffice, a few farm buildings, a mission church and a building formerly a mission school. This church is the oldest in this section of the state, having been organized in 1877 and here a large number of the Sioux Indians received their first training in Christianity, under theleadership of Dr. T. L. Riggs, Indian missionary.

Today there is only one Indian still living on Peoria bottom but there are many on the reservation who began their Christian and civilized life there and these have said, "we want to see Oahe once more," and decided to hold the meeting of the Dakota (Sioux) association of Congregational churches there. There will be quite a large number of Indians in attendance and to Dr. and Mrs. Riggs it will undoubtedly seem like old times when more than 300 Indians made their home on the bottom.

Sunday morning, May 27, there was was a service in the Dakota language followed by the communion and in the afternoon there was a memorial service in English. Every day during the association meeting there will be Bible study, topics concerning the social, economic and Christian life of the Indians will be discussed in the Dakota language; there will be meetings of delegates from the twenty-five Indian women's missionary societies and in the evenings Prof. F. B. Riggs of Santee, Neb., will exhibit pictures on the screen.

TENSION IN RUHR LESSENS

FALL TRAFFIC OUTLOOK GOOD

Railway Billion and Half Program Is Pushed.

PRESIDENT OF A. R. A. TESTIFIES

Labor Shortage Is Single Disturbing Factor.

I. C. C. Holds Hearing at Washington Into Adequacy of Locomotives and Cars of Carriers.

WASHINGTON, May 28. — The $1,500,000,000 program of equipment purchase and system betterments adopted by the railroads last month in anticipation of the greatest traffic load in history this fall, is being pushed rapidly, and there is every reason to believe that the fall traffic will be handled without difficulty, R. H. Aishton, president of the American railway association, testified before the interstate commerce commission today.

Aishton, appearing at the opening hearing of the commission's investigation into the adequacy of the locomotives and cars of the nation's carriers, declared that the following encouraging results have been obtained by cooperation of roads in compliance with the program:

1—Closed cars have been moved from the east to the west in anticipation of the crop movement this fall.

2—Open cars have been moved from the west to the east to move coal this summer.

3—From January 1 to May 12, a total of 17,023,946 cars of revenue freight have been loaded, compared with 14,278,847 cars in the corresponding period last year, and 13,311,555 in the same period in 1921.

4. Locomotives in need of heavy repairs have been reduced to 19.4 per cent and freight cars to 9.2 per cent in line with the provision of the program which calls for equipment in need of heavy repairs to be reduced in the case of locomotives to 15 per cent and in the case of cars to 5 per cent by October 1.

5 Stored serviceable locomotives have been increased from 576 on January 1 to 1,326 on May 1.

6. From March 15 to May 1, 28,613 freight cars have been ordered bringing to total of cars on order on May 1 to 115,765. Purchases from January 1, 1922 to May 1, 1923 have totaled 252,257 cars of which 136,501 have been delivered.

7. During the sixteen months from January 1, 1922 to May 1, 1923, 4,463 locomotives were purchased of which 2,607 have been installed, while 1,956 were on order on May 1.

8. Coal dumped at Lake Erie ports for shipment by water up the lakes on May 14 totaled 2,505,738 tons compared with 1,397,368 tons last year; 2,692,669 in 1921 and 864,523 tons in 1920.

The single disturbing feature of the roads' effort to whip their systems in shape for the enormous traffic load this fall is the labor shortage which "is slowing up deliveries of material necessary for the maintenance and operation of the railroads," Aishton said.

OLD SOLDIERS AT SERVICES

Veterans Have Part in Memorial Sunday Program at Elm Park Methodist Church.

Civil war veterans had a prominent part in the memorial Sunday services in the evening at Elm Park Methodist church. Farragut post drum corps played four pieces, and the old soldiers' quaret sang "Going One by One," "Marching Thru Georgia," "A Thousand Years, My Own Columbia," and "Comrade, Have You the Countersign." Mrs. N. W. Gaines sang "The Blue and the Gray," and two songs were illustrated by living pictures, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and "America the Beautiful." The church has a large frome and electrical devices operated by R. O. Lansing, by means of which tableaux can be presented in rapid succession, and these were used to illustrate the songs.

PUT PEP INTO PROCEEDINGS

BRYAN WAS A REAL FIGURE IN CHURCH ASSEMBLY.

Rev. D. R. Leland Says Life Injected by Former Lincoln Citizen Not Overstated by the Newspapers.

Rev. D. R. Leland, who returned Saturday from attending at the general assembly of the Presbyterian church at Indianapolis says that the life injected into the meeting by Lincoln's former citizen, W. J. Bryan, has not been over estimated in newspaper dispatches. Reporters from nearly all the big papers of the country were present to catch juicy morsels to be headlined in their home sheets. Dr. Leland regards the press reports as pretty accurate. He says, however, that Mr. Bryan really was beaten. The term, "fundamentalist," used in reports as applying to Mr. Bryan and his supporters, is said by Mr. Leland to represent only a small group in the assembly. The general terms in use are "conservatives", and "liberals." The conservatives object to being called fundamentalists.

Dr. Leland says that Mr. Bryan was responsible for injecting the name and teachings of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick into discussions and thru his insistence did in the end divert the assembly somewhat from the point in question, which was a matter of ecclesiastical law and not of doctrine. As originally brought before the assembly the resolution in regard to the First Presbyterian church of New York of which a Baptist minister has been temporarily in charge, was intended to open the way for a rule discouraging Presbyterian church from going outside the denomination for pastors who do not preach the Presbyterian faith. Mr. Bryan's effort succeeded in localizing what had been intended for general action. "As far as Dr. Fosdick is concerned," says Mr. Leland, "the assembly has no control over him, as he is under the Baptists."

DUNN STAYS TEMPORARILY

GOVERNOR HAS NOT FILLED LABOR SECRETARY'S PLACE.

He Attributes Mr. Dunn's Impetuous Letter of Loyalty to Kennedy to Exuberance of Youth.

Governor Bryan announced four appointments Monday but the post of secretary of the department of labor still being filled by Lester L. Dunn, who was assistant to Secretary Frank A. Kennedy, dismissed by the governor for criticism of the governor responsibility in the matter of lack of appropriations for the department.

"Official business," explained the governor Monday forenoon after he had called Mr. Dunn into his private office. The governor later referred to Mr. Dunn's letter of acceptance of the temporary appointment of secretary of labor with the understanding that the governor be made aware that he endorse all that Mr. Kennedy had said by the cause of lack of funds from the legislature. Mr. Dunn's letter voicing his loyalty to his former chief was made public Saturday.

"I attribute that impetuous outbreak," said Governor Bryan "as an indication of loyalty to his immediate chief, which was probably caused by exuberance of youth and lack of judgment. Mr. Dunn has kindly consented to serve temporarily until permanent arrangements can be made for the functioning of the labor laws, if that can be done after what the legislature did to the labor department."

The two young women employed in the department of labor resigned Saturday noon when they were informed that Mr. Kennedy had been removed by order of the governor. Miss Agnes Hughes, formerly of the department of animal industry, called at the labor office to begin work there Monday forenoon, but Secretary George E. Hall of the department of finance was not ready to consent to that arrangement and her employ was deferred for the present. Mr. Dunn was on duty alone in the office Monday forenoon.

DELUGE AGAIN IN SOUTHWEST

THREE INCH RAIN IN THAT CORNER OF STATE.

Rail Tracks Weakened and Flood Damage of the Week Before Added to by the Latest Precipitation.

A heavy rain that softened railroad tracks and added to flood waters fell Sunday night between Akron and Cambridge along the main line of the Burlington railroad west. This rain was exceedingly heavy in places, as much as three inches being reported. Another report indicated a heavy rain at Brush, Col., west of Akron, and weather reports indicated that southwest Nebraska and northwest Kansas were given another soaking by that storm. The rain was heavy from north to south between North Platte and Goodland, Kas.

Weather reports showed 1.30 inches at Culbertson, one inch at North Platte, six-tenths at Broken Bow and eight-tenths at Goodland, Kas.

Trains were delayed near Benkelman, the temporary track built around the recent wreck of No. 2 having softened in the downpour. It was necessary to reconstruct this temporary track. Several passenger trains were delayed by the weakening of this but they were gotten safely across about 5 a. m. Monday.

Trackmen are still fighting flood damage in the Beaver valley along the St. Francis branch. General Superintendent L. B. Lyman, who returned from a four days inspection trip of the damage in that country Monday morning said that in places the track was washed off the grade and into the creek. Three thousand feet of track was gone in one place. In many places it was necessary to "crib" up the track for long stretches where the flood had broken thru. New rails and many ties had to be provided to replace the track. It was expected to reopen the line by Thursday of this week.

Because of the break in the track at Benkelman a number of trains due in Lincoln Monday were delayed and several westbound trains were late in reaching Denver.

Flood troubles did not reach as far south as the Rock Island Union Pacific lines in Kansas.

The verdict was reached Friday night, but owing to a misunderstanding of the court's instructions, it was kept sealed until Monday. The plaintiff alleged that she was injured during an attempted criminal assault alleged to have been performed by the defendant.

FOUR HEADS CHOPPED OFF

GOVERNOR SWINGS AX UNDER DATE OF JUNE 1.

K. C. Knudson of Genoa Will Take the Place of R. C. King, Chief of State Banking Bureau.

Governor's Appointees.

K. C. Knudson, Genoa, chief banking bureau.

Dr. J. D. Case, Lincoln, chief health bureau.

Vincent Stahl, Seward, chief clerk department of agriculture.

Mrs. Clara C. Clayton, Lincoln, chief child welfare.

Governor Bryan announced appointments Monday to fill four vacancies which he said would exist in code departments June 1. When asked how a vacancy will occur in one of the bureaus on that particular day he said: "That is one of the psychological effects that may be expected about this time of year." The places now filled by republicans will hereafter be filled by democrats.

"It is probable," replied the governor when asked if certain oppointees were democrats.

K. C. Knudson, president of the Farmers' State bank of Genoa, who is to take the place of R. C. King at the head of the bureau of banking in the department of trade and commerce, was the democratic and progressive party candidate for nomination for state treasurer last fall and was defeated at the primary on the democratic ticket.

Governor Bryan said Mr. Knudson is competent to serve in any capacity in the banking business. He is uncertain what title to confer upon him, and this appointment as well as others announced are made subject to change if the governor finds necessary under a proposed reorganization of affairs of code departments. Mr. Knudson is to fill the place now held by R. C. King who desires to be relieved to care for business affairs.

The governor did not indicate that Mr. Knudson is eventually to take the place of J. E. Hart, present holdover secretary of the department of trade and commerce, including the banking bureau.

"Mr. Hart resigned the first of the year," said the governor, "and I have not accepted it and he has asked to be relieved, but in view of the new banking law with added responsibilities he has been remaining to keep the banking laws functioning until we can salvage the wreck made by the legislature in failing to provide a salary for the supervising head of the department and which granted a decreased appropriation for expenses.

Mr. Knudson's salary will be $3,000 for the present, the same as paid to Mr. King."

Dr. Case Former Officer.

Dr. J. D. Case of Lincoln has been appointed to take the place of Dr. I. H. Dillon, chief of the bureau of health, department of public welfare. He will receive $3,500 a year. The salary in the past has been $4,000. Dr. Case formerly held a similar position under a democratic administration when the department of health, was directly under three state officers. He also served two years as superintendent of the hospital for the insane at Lincoln, served as assistant superintendent at the Norfolk state hospital and was formerly physician for the Milford industrial home for women.

Vincent Stahl of Seward is to take the place of J. W. Mayer of Beatrice, chief clerk for Deputy Secretary Grant L. Shumway of the department of agriculture. Mr. Stahl has been connected with the Blue Valley Power company. He was formerly food and oil inspector under Clarence E. Harman, state food commissioner. He served as delegation to the democratic national convention. His salary will be the same as Mr. Mayer drew, $2,600 a year.

Mrs. Clara C. Clayton of Lincoln is to take the place of Mrs. Hornberger, chief of the bureau of child welfare department of public welfare at $175 a month. The pay in the past has been $208 a month. The governor said he considered Mrs. Clayton without a superior in qualification for her post. She has spent a lifetime in welfare work without compensation and for the past few years was active in asking for welfare legislation as a representative of women voters.

FEUDIST SAYS SELF DEFENSE

JIM MARINO OBJECTS TO FIRST DEGREE MURDER VERDICT.

Claims That His Victim, Sam Nanfito, Had Blackmailed Family and Had Threatened to Kill Him.

A chapter from the Mafia was recorded in supreme court Monday, when Jim Marino, convicted of first degree murder in Omaha, filed a 238 page brief to aid in convincing that tribunal that he was justified in what he did and should be given a new trial.

Sam Nanfito, another member of the Italian colony in Omaha, was the victim. Marino shot him from the vantage point of a second story window as Nanfito was passing along on the sidewalk, six or eight feet below. Marino says that he did not shoot until Nanfito had drawn a pistol and shouted an intention of killing him.

Marino says that the feud began in 1920, when an uncle, Joe Marino, was killed. A man named Radacia was arrested on the charge of being the murderer. Jim Marino says that Nanfito came to him and wanted him to swear that he saw Radacia do the killing. Jim refused, saying he was not present. Nanfito is then alleged to have said to him: "You are the first man to ever say 'no' to me. Remember this and you will regret it."

In September, 1921, Marino says the little daughter of his brother, Dominic, who runs a pool hall, was kidnaped. Nanfito came to him and his brother and told them to make no fuss or publicity about it, and he would get the girl back. He insisted, however on being paid for it, and asked $2,000 ransom. When Jim said this was too much money he says Nanfito told him he had better raise it or he would be next.

The ransom money was paid, and the child was brought back in a sack and in a drugged condition by Nanfito. He says they never said anything about it because Nanfito threatened their lives if they did. This was in May, 1922. Later two different Italians told them that Nanfito had offered them $500 each if they would the Marinos, and when they objected he said he would do it himself.

Jim Marino says that when he was putting up his car one night Nanfito grabbed him, but he broke loose. Two shots fired at him as he fled missed him. Later he received a letter in which he was called "dear godfather" and told that Nanfito had gone to San Francisco and that it would be safe for him to go about again. A little later he heard Nanfito was back breathing vengeance. Being fearful of being killed he got a shotgun and for a week hid away in his brother's house. He says that he just happened to be sitting in the window when Nanfito came along, and that as he had his back to Nanfito when the latter called out to him he could not withdraw and just had to shoot.

A considerable part of the brief is devoted to a contention that the constitution was badly fractured when Juror Herbert Jackson sat in the case. It is claimed that he was actually a resident of Hamilton county at the time and not eligible to sit as a juror in Douglas county. He was one of a number of talesmen called in.

FRENCH MOVE TO END DISORDERS IN RUHR

De Goutte Orders German Rial Employes to Work or Be Exiled.

TAKE COMMAND AT WANNE

Bar Pedestrians From Streets When Alarm Sounds.

GERMAN INDUSTRY SUFFERING

Tension in Ruhr Lessening, After Demonstrations in Which Thirty Were Killed in Week.

BERLIN, May 28.—Thirty communists and civilians have been killed in the revolutionary uprising in the Ruhr this week, the Vossische Zeitung estimated today.

French occupational forces may intervene to restrain communists in the Ruhr district.

If conditions are not improved immediately, it is said, the French will be used to quell disturbances and safeguard the communities against further disorders.

At Wanne the French already have stepped in to restore order. Patrols were held in readiness there for several days and when an alarm was sounded they barred all pedestrians from the streets.

French officials are moving to stop the spreading strikes of workers in the Ruhr district, according to word received here today.

General De Goutee is said to have ordered German railway men thruout the Ruhr region to return to their jobs within two days or be banished from the district.

DUSSELDORF, May 28.—With thirteen dead in week-end riots in the Ruhr, reports thruout the valley today indicated the tension is lessening, at least for the moment.

In Bochum, where communists beseiged the municipal officials and assumed practical control of the city, the self defense league has succeeded in regaining th upper hand.

French in Essen have seized several million paper marks, following repeated refusal of German officials to pay certain occupational expenses.

Workers held peaceful demonstrations in many cities during the night.

Officials fear, however, that the lull is only temporary and that renewed attacks may be made.

Work is being carried on irregularly thruout the region.

At Bochum and Dortmund the iron workers are striking. Most miners are working. At Gelsenkirchen the iron workers are holding to their jobs while the miners are divided, some of them being on strike.

A demonstration was held peacefully at Hoerde by communists today.

KLANSMEN DEFY THE LAW

Thousands in New York Refuse to File With Secretary of State Roster of Society.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Thousands of white robed members of the ku klux klan following week end meetings held all the way across New York state from Niagara Falls to East Port, L. I., stand today in open defiance of the new state law, which compels filing with the secretary of state the roster of secret societies such as the klan.

Amid flaring red torches and before mysterious altars, draped with the American flag, klansmen denounced the law and pledged themselves to obey the constitution of the klan, declaring Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York state had signed his political death warrant as far as his presidential aspirations were concerned by supporting the state dictum directed against the klan.

Six aerial circus events calling for the appearance of twenty-two planes in the air at the same time, will start as soon as the T-2 is sighted.

DISCUSS NATIONAL CRISES

Oberlies Sunday School Class Will Tackle Chivalry Next.

Are national crises inevitable? The Oberlies class for men at the Lindell hotel discussed this topic Sunday, based upon the Scripture teachings found in Isaiah and other prophets of Israel. It was brought out that crises are periodical in a nation's life, and their prevention extremely difficult. One declared that the crisis is a good thing, as it brings to a head existing evils, and the nation as a sick man must be operated upon drastically and suddenly to save the life.

Selfishness and, thoughtless for the rights of others is a greater national peril than the yellow plague, intemperance or the white slave traffic. We are fast becoming a nation bent entirely too much upon our own rights and enjoyments and dissipations, and give too little heed to what is best for others. The money monopoly was declared to be a possible boon to the nation, but it is a perilous and selfish thing as well. John D. Rockefeller came in for a severe drubbing. The class cheered the name of Henry Ford in contrast.

The topic for next Sunday is, "Has Chivalry Gone With Courage?" The orchestra will start sharp at 9:45 at the Lindell hotel. All men of all creeds are invited.

WHEAT COMES OUT RAPIDLY

IMPROVEMENT IN CONDITION IN SOUTHWEST NEBRASKA.

Prospects Are Much Better Now Than Earlier in the Season With Promise of a Considerable Return.

Wheat has made wonderful strides in southwest Nebraska in the past three weeks and in many fields where it was feared the crop would not be worth harvesting it is said the conditions are now promising for a big yield. The ground is soaked and conditions are ideal for the crop to continue growth and development.

That was the report brought [illegible] to Lincoln Monday [illegible] eral Superintendent [illegible] the Burlington who [illegible] days in the flood coun[illegible] west. He says some co[illegible] out on the lowlands a[illegible] replanted. The ground [illegible] conditions were never bet[illegible] crop in that section than now.

He noted the transformation in the wheat fields. Where a few weeks ago the fields were thin, almost bare, the plant has stooled out until it covers the ground and gives promise of a big yield where no return at all was looked for.

Sunday evening he drove from Cedar Bluffs, Kas., to McCook and in the three days preceding that he drove along his line of railroad as far west as Traer, Kas., surveying the flood damage. The thing that struck him most forcibly was the improvement in the condition of winter wheat.

Mr. Lyman also noted that county bridge work is an expensive thing. He says when the railroad wants to span a stream the property owners and county authorities all take a part is seeing that the railroads in no wise obstructs the stream. Where the county want to build a little box culvert or a light steel one span bridge will cross a stream where the railroad has built a five span bridge. The result is that when the flood comes the county loses all of its crossings, that the losses are total and the cost of replacement equal to that of the original cost of building.

A cloudburst in the hills at the head of Beaver creek sent that stream on the rampage a week ago and the result was that not only county but railroad crossings and grades over streams were taken out, damaged or weakened by the down rush of water.

SCRAPPING BATTLESHIPS.

PHILADELPHIA — (By Mail) — Four of the "eagles of the sea"—the Kansas, Louisiana, New Hampshire and Minnesota—are now being scrapped at the Philadelphia navy yard. These first class battleships are being scrapped under the provision of the arms conference treaty. While actual obliteration of the vessels has not been started, the dreadnoughts have been stripped of their equipment so they are practically useless as fighting crafts. All essential equipment has been removed and placed on other vessels.

CITY CHANGES ITS BOUNDARY

REDUCES HOLDINGS WITHOUT LOWERING ASSESSMENTS.

Gives Half a Street to County in Order That Stretch May Be Paved Without Amounting to Confiscation.

In order that A street, First west to Folsom, may be paved without the element of confiscation, the city is reducing its waist line by giving the north half of the street to the county. An ordinance reducing the city limits was introduced at Monday's council meeting. In this instance, the city gives something away without reducing its earning power from a tax assessment standpoint. The boundary line between county and city west of First street is the middle of the road on A street. Efforts have been made to induce property owners to sign in order that the two governmental units could join hands in a paving project. The city has been unsuccessful for the reason that the lowlands or badlands or whatever they may be termed between First and Hancock, one block this side of A, cannot carry a paving cost burden.

The stretch west on A from First to Folsom is an even half mile. The county has been ready to pave the south half of the street for some time and presumably will proceed with the whole this summer or as soon as the ordinance becomes effective. From First to Hancock, the city abandons a 33 feet strip. From Hancock to Folsom, one block, it retains 3 1-2 feet of the thirty-three and this narrow strip will be assessed against city property. The assessment, however, will be nominal. The county contemplates a 25-foot pavement.

City Engineer Bates raised his sights four degrees when it came to re-estimating cost of paying in four districts which had been snubbed by the contractors. His new estimates are 4 per cent above the original but are 4 per cent under his estimate of one year ago. Here are the new estimates as submitted to the council:

District 471—Prospect, Sixteenth to Seventeenth, $3,000.

District 534—Rathbone road, Van Dorn to Plymouth, $17,000.

District 531—Twenty-first, Sumner to north line of Hardenberg's subdivision and Sumner, Twenty-first to Twenty-second, $5,500.

District 539 — F street, Twenty-seventh to Thirtieth and Twenty-eighth, Randolph to F, $13,200.

The engineer is of the opinion that the higher estimates will draw bids. The contract for the paving of Twenty-seventh, South to Woodsdale; Van Dorn, Twentieth to Sheridan and Manse court, Twenty-seventh to Bradfield drive, was awarded the Abel Construction company at $68,003. Mr. Bates also raised his estimate sights in connection with the following projects to be placed on the market for bids:

Paving 461—Park, Tenth to Eleventh, $3,400.

Paving 535—Harwood, Twenty-third to Twenty-fourth, $2,200.

Alley paving 130—A to Washington and Twenty-second to Twenty-third, $1,400.

Paving 483—Peach street, Eleventh to Fourteenth, $9,300.

Paving 388—Thirtieth, Vine to Missouri Pacific, $6,900.

ON TRAIL OF A GUNMAN

John Whitfield Believed to Have Passed Thru Cedar Falls, Ia., Saturday Afternoon.

WATERLOO, Ia., May 28.—John L. Whitfield, alleged slayer of a Cleveland, O., policeman, for whom police of middlewestern states are prosecuting a relentless search, dashed over Rainbow drive and thru the city of Cedar Falls, Ia., late Saturday afternoon, according to Motorcycle Policeman C. R. Orvis, who, with a companion, positively identified the mulatto fugitive.

According to Orvis, Whitfield was driving a high powered Packard automobile, and while the motorcycle ran abreast of the car, Orvis and his companion obtained a close view of the alleged slayer's features, which correspond to the pictures of Whitfield.

Orvis commanded the driver to stop, whereupon Whitfield, with consummate cunning slowed down with the remark: "All right, boss, just as you say." But when Orvis had prepared to dismount, Whitfield suddenly stepped on the gas and sped away at a high rate of speed.

Orvis explained his reason for not shooting by saying the recollection of the recent tragedy in Floyd county in which a high school student was shot thru mistaken identity.

Actual identification was not made by Orvis until Sunday when he compared the man in the car with pictures of Whitfield published in newspapers and posted in police stations.

The driver of the huge car crashed into three other machines standing on the streets of Cedar Falls in his mad rush down the streets out into the open country.

FIGHT ON EGG GAMBLER

American Farm Bureau Federation Launches Move to Drive Him Out of Business.

CHICAGO, May 28.—The American farm bureau federation today launched a move to drive the egg gambler out of business and increase the producers' margin of profit.

The plan, which calls for national cooperative marketing, was outlined to a national egg conference opening here by Walter Peteet, director of cooperative marketing for the bureau, and Aaron Sapiro, cooperative counsel. Representatives of state farm bureaus, poultry raisers and organizations and farmers, including many women, attended the initial session.

The cooperative scheme advanced is modeled generally after that maintained by the California prune growers, the mid-western wheat growers, and the southern cotton and tobacco producers.

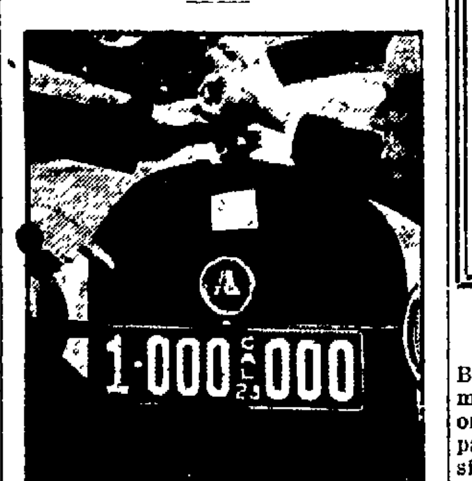

"Under present conditions egg marketing is haphazard," said Peteet. "Often the consumer pays 10 cents more a dozen than the producer receives."

Farm bureau officials declare that this margin will be cut from both ends, allowing the farmer more money and the consumer a lower price under the national cooperative marketing plan which would eliminate brokers and "corners" by speculators.

Central points where the distribution will be worked out in detail will be opened. White shelled eggs, a favorite with New York consumers, will be sent there and the brown shelled, for which a ready market is found in Boston, will be consigned to that city.

The marketing plan outlined by Sapiro today included the labeling of every egg marketed with the date produced. This, it was explained, is to protect consumers, and eliminate "cold storage corners" for purpose of profiteering by brokers.

RAISES NEW LAW POINTS

CHALLENGES RIGHT TO COLLECT INTEREST ON DEPOSITS.

Guaranty Fund, It Is Claimed, Not Liable for Any Profits on Investments of Persons in Failed Banks.

Something new in the way of law points was raised Monday in a brief filed in supreme court in support of the action of the receiver of the Nebraska state bank of Milligan in refusing to pay interest on a deposit in the failed bank. Sloan, Sloan & Keenan, who appear for the receiver, challenge the right of any person owning a deposit in a failed bank to ask and receive interest thereon.

Katie Vavra deposited $3,200 in the bank on the sixteenth of last June. The receiver fought the claim, but was defeated in district court. He is now convinced that the woman is entitled to receive repayment of the deposit out of the guaranty fund, but insists that no interest whatever should be allowed upon it.

The argument in support of the contention that no interest is collectible, is that the fund was established to protect depositors and insure on a strictly mutual dollar basis the repayment of the actual deposits made; that it was not established to protect profits of investing deposiors; that the provisions of it do not warrant a discrimination in favor of the investing depositor, who obtains interest for his deposit, against the depositor who puts it in subject to check, and that to allow interest is a discrimination against the legitimate depositor and in favor of the one who puts his money in bank merely as an investor.

It is insisted that the fund does not, according to a proper reading of the law, guarantee not only the return of the dollar deposits but the prompt payment of profit made by this form of investment. It is averred that whether they matured before or after the failure of the bank makes no difference and that to compel the fund to pay interest, insofar as the law taxes banks an a basis of their deposits, is taking property from the assessed banks without due process of law.

The staute is cited to prove the argument that thruout the banking act are used the terms deposits and average daily deposits. Deposits are what are placed in the bank, which means that it may be drawn out. It does not mean potential withdrawals. Withdrawals is a term used by which deposits terminate as such. Deposits and withdrawals are identical in amount when no interest is charged. Where interest is charged the earned interest measures the difference between the two definitive terms, and there is nothing in the law to especially charge the guaranty fund with that differential.

The fact is further pointed out that there is no burden placed by law upon any interest or profit in the particular bank to furnish a basis for the protection of similar profits in other banks, and that when the law makes the average daily deposits the basis for assessment it does not mean that the banker shall make such interminable calculations as would be necessary if all interest due each day was figured.

BANDIT IN BLACK BELT

Chicago Authorities Believe Slayer of Cleveland Policeman After Dope.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Search for J. L. Whitfield, negro bandit accused of murdering Dennis Griffin, Cleveland policeman, sited to Chicago's "black belt" today.

Information that the fugitive had crossed the Wisconsin-Illinois line and was heading for Chicago, was obtained from Waukegan friends of Whitfield. The trail of the alleged slayer since he escaped from Madison, Wis., police last week has pointed towards this city.

Authorities here believed Whitfield's craving for drugs might drive him into the open. A complete outfit was found in the auto in which he escaped from Cleveland. Physicians and druggists were asked to be on the alert and were furnished with his complete description.

UP FROM THE DEATH CELL

The Story of a Man Who Made Good

BY JOHN W. KANE

EX-CONVICT NO. 1666.

(Copyright, 1923, in the United States, Canada, Great Britian and South America, by the North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

The warden left me along with Mrs. Booth, which was a great surprise to me. That was the first time a prisoner had ever been left alone in company with a visitor to that prison since the easy-going territorial days some twenty years before.

Mrs. Booth was perhaps in the late forties then, altho she looked much younger. She was unaffected, possessed of a perfect poise; and she was both a good talker and a good listener.

We talked for a half hour about matters in general pertaining to prisoners; then she referred to the letters that some of my friends had written her.

"Several of them seem to think," said she, "that you might soon want to petition the pardoning power for clemency in some form."

"No. Mrs. Booth," I replied, "not soon—and any talk at this time might really injure my prospects for later on."

She seemed to be studying me intently for a moment.

"I hope," she remarked in her usual even and easy tone, "that you are really as patient and sensible as that sounds. I believe it is only about the third time in all my years of this work that I have heard a prisoner express a like idea—and I'm quite sure that you are the first life prisoner who has done so."

"Well," returned I, "my hope here is in a way to work out my salvation, if it be possible."

"It is more than possible—it is almost certain that you will," she assured me. "Of all the assets that one may have in this life, there are three that are most valuable; and they are, sound common sense, patience and a desire to do good work."

At that instant I understood why she was so successful in winning men and women back to right living—and then as instantly there came into my mind a thought of my proposed parole law. "Here," thought I " is the very place and time for beginning."

I explained about the twenty-five-year parole law, and without of course telling her of my purpose to try to set the idea going, expressed a hope that a more sensible and liberal parole law might soon be enacted.

She Picks a Big Flaw.

"With, we'll say, a fifteen-year parole law," I suggested, " a life man would not only have something definite toward which to work, but he would then have a way by which to fulfill the requirements of law while working out his salvation. Even solely as a policy measure, to keep otherwise desperate men in hope and away from the idea of any attempts at escape—even upon that ground it would be a good law."

"Yes," she agreed, "that would be productive of more good, I think, than no parole law for that class of prisoners—and much better than the present law. But don't forget this: any time you attempt to make a parole law for life prisoners compulsory on the pardoning power, your attempt will fail—because such a law would simply destroy all the force and effect of a life sentence."

I wondered why I had not seen that before.

"Such a parole law would have to read 'may be paroled', rather than 'shall' or 'must,'" she went on. "Or it might even become necessary to have the introduced bill to deal with prisoners in general, and then get in that part relating to life men as a kind of negative clause; that is, to have it read—'provided that no person serving a life sentence shall be paroled until he shall have served'—whatever the proposed time."

I marvelled at my oversight and was heartily glad I had talked with the Little Mother.

"I see," said I, "that you have given a great deal of thought to such matters."

"Quite a bit", was her reply. "And I know, Mr. Kane, that about the hardest thing to do is to get thru a law in any wise favorable to persons in your present situation."

I liked her all the more for her frankness, and I quickly decided to go straight to the point in the matter then in mind. She glanced at the clock.

Help Is Pledged.

"Mrs. Booth," I began, "could you conscientiously endorse a parole law for life men in my situation, if it read 'may be paroled'?"

"Most assuredly."

"I must ask you something else. You know that I write for publication. Now, I've specialized on that one thing—writing. And will you, gefore you leave here, tell the warden that you and I have discussed the matter of a better parole law for persons in my situation, and that you would like to have me submit in writing to you and him my idea as to the reasons why such a law ought to be enacted?"

"I'll go further than that," she answered, "I'll tell him that we have discussed this matter and that I am desirous of having him see your written ideas as to the merit of such a law. Furthermore, that I'd appreciate it greatly if he, after reading your expressed views, would tell me what he thinks of them."

Five minutes later I was back at my desk, happy in the thought that I had made a good beginning.

A week later I started again to the front office. The warden was alone.

"Good morning, Kane—how are you?" he looked up to say; and then without awaiting my answer in full: "Take that chair, Kane. I sent for you in order to take up something of which Mrs. Booth was speaking. What I wanted is that you should be told of her taking me into the case concerning your hope of a better parole law. I think that you should have mentioned that to me first; but inasmuch as you and Mrs. Booth talked of it, and—according to what she tells me—you have some definite plans about the matter, I'd like to hear them."

I Use Guile.

I had been there long enough to find out quite a bit about the head of that institution. I knew that Mrs. Booth had not told him that I had some definite plans concerning the matter but that he had taken that way of finding out whether or not I did have in my mind the idea of getting such thought going, and I knew that just so surely as he believed that I deliberately planned to reach him and, perhaps, others thru Mrs. Booth, he would be against the thing right from the beginning.

"Mrs. Booth must have misunderstood me," I explained. "While I don't recall exactly how the talk about a parole law for 'lifers' began, in the course of our talkin concerning it I believe I expressed certain views as to why I believe a more liberal parole law, and one that could actually be used in many ways, would be a good thing."

"You did give her an outline of what you thought might be a good parole law, didn't you?" he asked.

"I told her that because I had thought about the matter a great deal and hoped, I had in a way thought over possible provisions in such a law. I found out, however, that some of my former ideas were not feasible—Mrs. Booth suggesting things from time to time, and then I told her that from then on, whether I either merely thought about the law or for my own satisfaction wrote down something about it, I would be certain to improve it because of her expressed views."

"Well," and he leaned back in his swivel chair and folded his large fat hands over his waistband, "she must have believed that your ideas and hers combined would be worth considering because she wanted me to have you write out your views on the matter."

I kind of laughed; and then, hesitatingly, as if slightly embarrassed, I uttered as unvarnished a falsehood as ever fell from the lips of any man who conscientiously felt that the end justified most any posible means.

The Project Moves.

"I suppose she told you that I spoke of your progressive ideas, and that I felt sure that you had already considered the matter."

"No, I don't believe she did," he replied.

"Well, I wish she had done so," I told him. "And I believe that Mrs. Booth ought to have explained to you that I felt reticent about discussing any such matter, because surely that is not the business of a man in my position—but rather it belongs to thos elike yourself, who have had years of experience and know wha tis best."

"I'm glad you feel that way about it, Kane," he assured me, "because you couldn't afford to get into your head any such idea as that you ought to try to influence legislation."

"Why, certainly not," I laughingly lied again. "I would no more think of trying to start such a movement looking to that kind of law, than I'd——"

"I knew that of course. But now"—and he hesitated—"I promised Mrs. Booth that I'd ask you to let me see your ideas on the matter written out; and some time you could write down what you think about it. Of course you wouldn't want to sign your name to it, would you?"

"Indeed not," I answered. "And I want you to know, warden, that while I know I'm not likely to say anything that you haven't already thought of, I surely appreciate your willingness to read over whatever I submit to you. And of course I won't tell a single person anywhere that I'm submitting anything of the kind to you."

"Yes, that's right. He glanced at his watch. "And now that's all Kane—and just take your time in the matter and send it to me personally.'"

CHICAGO, May 28.—Roscoe Fitch, Ludington, Mich., student at Northwestern University, who gave important information in the investigation into the disappearance of Leighton Mount, today complained to authorities that he had been threatened by fellow students.

In a letter to state's attorney's office, he said he had been warned to stay away from the campus by a "vigilance - committee." He also charged the university had cancelled one of his registrations and taken away two credits.

Digging in the sand under a Lake Michigan pier where Mount's skeleton was found today revealed two teeth which added to the positive identification of the bones as those of Mount. Mount disappeared during a class rush eighteen months ago and his body was found only recently.

PLACES FIGHT UP TO PUBLIC

LAFOLLETTE'S RAILROAD STAND CARRIED TO PEOPLE.

Delegates to National Conference on Rail Valuation Take Home Program Outlined at Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 28. — Senator Robert M. La Follette's fight on higher railroad valuation was placed before the American public today.

Delegates to the national conference on railorad valuation, including congressmen, state officials and public and private organization leaders, carried home the program outlined at the convention last week and set out to line up state governments and organizations in their territory to back the movement.

The next move will be before the interstate commerce commission, which is valuing the railroads. Demands will include that the commission determine the original investment of the lines as well as the reconstruction cost. La Follette charges that under the latter, the roads are prepared to demand a $10,000,000,000 valuation and $500,000,000 yearly rate increase.

As a sequel to the conference here last week, representatives of railway unions and brotherhoods met and considered a legislative program which was reported to include abolishing the United States railroad labor board or radical curtailment of its powers.

PASTORS START REBELLION

Some Presbyterians Declare Bryan's Resolution for Pledge Is "Insult."

CHICAGO, May 28.—(United Press.)—Several leading Presbyterian pastors here rebelled against action of the Presbyterian general assembly last week in adopting William Jennings Bryan's resolution that clergymen and laymen sign a pledge of abstinence from liquors.

"I shall refuse to sign such a card," Rev. G. C. Whimsett, pastor of the South Chicago Presbyterian church, said. "It is an insult."

Dr. William J. Du Bordieu, Jefferson pastor, declared that while he personally had no objection to the card he regarded it as "unnecessary." He also questioned wisdom of such a pledge in a requirement for entering the theological seminaries.

SHANGHAI—Relatives of Leon Friedman of Chicago, who with other foreigners, is held for ransom by Chinese bandits, have received an encouraging letter here from Rev. Father William Lenfers, a Catholic missionary priest, stationed at Lincheng. Father Lenfers, who is assisting in the negotiations for the release of the prisoners, writes that he believes "everything is all right." Father Lenfers is from Techny, Ill.

A NEW TREATMENT FOR BRAIN DISEASE

Millions to Be Saved Governmental Instittuions for Insane If Tryparsamid Is Used for Paresis, It Is Found.

MADISON, Wis., May 28.—Millions of dollars will be saved on governmental institutions for insane if tryparsamid treatment for paresis, dread brain disease and aftermath of syphilis, becomes widespread.

In three and one-half years of experimentation with the new treatment at Wisconsin Psychiatric institute here, thirty-four committed patients have been discharged as cured and are now earning their living. The average cost to the state of a paresis patient from the time of commitment to his death is $5,000.

Ninety-seven cases of men in all stages of paresis have been treated by the four Wisconsin specialists, W. F. Lorenz, A. S. Lovenhart, W. J. Bleckwenn and F. J. Hodges, and improvement was shownin practically every case.

Tryparsamid is an arsenical drug discovered in 1915 by the Rockefeller Institute for medical research. The Chicago Public Health Institute financed the research that led to the announcement of positively successful results.

Besides the Wisconsin institute, the John Hopkins hospital, the Mayo brothers and the Chicago Public Health institute have been applying the treatment successfully.

Dr. Lovenhart of the University of Wisconsin medical school, stated today that the treatment is simple and probably will be less expensive than the other means used in combatting paresis.

The discoverers also recommend the drug to be used in syphilis treatment when the patient is suffering from malnutrition, o ris past middle age, as the treatment has not the destructive effect of the other arsenical drugs now usedin treatment of syphilis. The drug is injected into the veins.

Paresis appears in approximately 5 per cent of syphilis victims, usually several years after the disease is apparently cured. Complete loss of memory, tremors of the mouth and loss of mentality are some of the results of paresis.

"We can't tell whether the treatment is entirely successful until the end of the patient's life," Dr. Lovenhart said, "but we know that we have been successful in putting many of our paresis patients back on their jobs earning a livelihood for themselves and their families."

Cards were out announcing the approaching marriage of Dr. Edward G. Watson of Friend and Miss Mary Olive Latta of Lincoln.

The possibility that the balloon might be made a useful adjunct of war was suggested by the problem that confronted Commodore Schyley, who had Admiral Cervera bottled up in Santiago harbor.

The second annual Pan-Hellenic ball was held at Burlington beach.

CHARGE FRAUD IN LAND DEAL

Two New Deefndants Cited in Case of Smithe Against Stewart Farm Mortgage Company.

The morning session of federal district court Monday was largely given to argument in the equity case of W. Glen Smith and Bessie Smith of Kearney against the Stewart Farm Mortgage company et al, in which two new defendants were cited, J. C. Nichols and the Commerce Trust company of Kansas City. The Smiths charge that Mr. Nichols and the trust company were not purchasers in due course and in good faith of the $13,000 note they are suing to have cancelled, and allege that they are liable to charges of fraud. The defendants were to have their hearing during the afternoon.

The suit grows out of an alleged fraudulent land deal in 1920, the Stewart company selling Mr. Smith and his sister eighty acres of land in Hidalgo county, Texas, which they say is worthless, needing to be 'cleared and not being irrigable from the Mercedes plant. Meantime the Smiths sold their home farm in Buffalo county without recording the mortgage by which they had secured the $13,000 note they gave for the Texas land. Being unable to consummate the sale after placing the mortgage on record, they were sued by the purchasers, who were awarded judgment and are threatening to sell the farm.

They contend that W. E. Stewart used their note to pay a personal debt to J. C. Nichols, taking it from the assets of his corporation, and that Mr. Nichols assigned it to the Commerce Trust company as collateral for another note, but afterward recovered it and now has it. Mr. Nichols and the trust company will contend that they are not parties to the fraud, if any.

BALDWIN IS PARTY CHIEF

CONSERVATIVES CHOOSE PREMIER FOR NEW LEADER.

New Perils for Prime Minister, Due to Dissatisfaction of Chamberlain Group and Laborites.

LONDON, May 28. Premier Stanley Baldwin was elected new leader of the conservative party in a meeting at the hotel Cecil here today.

The meeting was held to solidify the elements of the party to full strength when Baldwin goes before the house of commons to face his strongly increasing opposition.

Political students speaking thru the newspapers see his path fraught with new perils. Dissatisfaction of the group led by Austen Chamberlain, unmasking of the liberals and laborites who felt sympathy with Bonar Law because of the former's throat affliction and refrained from attacks, and the announcement of Lloyd George that he will not drop personal considerations which caused him to deal gently with the government, and all are combining to work against the new ministry.

The conservatives' meeting was called at the hotel Cecil to encourage Baldwin in his undertaking before going to parliament to give his eagerly awaited statement on foreign and domestic policies.

A $10,000 SODA.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(By Mail.)—An unprecedented jump in the price of ice cream sodas with the customer attempting to reap the profit was recorded here recently when Mrs. Lizzie Romagosa of Thibodeaux, La., filed suit against a local soft drink dealer for $10,000 damages alleged false accusations. According to the charges contained in the petition Mrs. Romagosa and a friend entered the drink establishment and ordered two ice cream sodas. The friend, a lady, consumed her soda in short order and departed, after paying for the "treats," leaving Mrs. Romagosa to take her time. When Mrs. Romagosa finished her soda and left the place, she alleges, the manager followed her and proclaimed in a loud tone that she was beating the house out of the price of two sodas. Mrs. Romagosa asks the damages for the humiliation.

WARNS RESCUERS AWAY.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Scalding in clouds of live steam, Hugh Kirk, engineer of a homeward bound "picnic train" wrecked in Vancortlandt Park, New York, warned rescuers away.

"I am going to die anyway," he said. "Please stand back. This boiler is liable to explode any minute."

One man crawled into the cab and attempted to extricate the engineer but failed. He finally retreated with blistered hands and face.

Firemen finally removed Kirk but he died a few minutes later. Nine passengers were slightly injured.

CHICAGO, May 28.—"The house of a thousand windows," a gay road house known as the "jazziest spot in Chicago," was closed by police last night. Twenty men and women were seized.

LINCOLN GIRLS DIE IN TEXAS ACCIDENT

Two Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Belk Will Be Buried in Lincoln Tuesday.

Frances and Carolyn, thirteen and fifteen years' old daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Belk, who were killed in an accident at Amarillo, Tex., May 24, were born in Lincoln and lived here until two years ago when their parents moved to Texas.

Charles A. Belk is an electrical engineer and for several years was engineer at the city high school building. At one time the family home was at 1720 Vine street. Later they lived nearer the high school building, 620 South Twenty-third. Mrs. Bert, and Mrs. Fred Barribo of Lincoln were sisters of the girls. They are now with their mother at Amarillo. Bert Barribo, a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Belk, said that the telegram announcing the death of the children did not state the nature of the accident.

The father is expected to arrive here at 5:40 Monday afternoon with the bodies. Funeral services will be held at the Splain & Schnell chapel at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Rev. J. W. Hilton will have charge and burial will be in Wyuka.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

CORNERSTONE LAID SUNDAY

B'NAI JESHURUN CONGREGATION TO HAVE NEW HOME.

Impressive Ceremonies Are Held at Twentieth and South at 3 p. m. —R. V. Pepperberg Has Charge.

The cornerstone of the new Jewish temple of B'nai Jeshurun, which is being erected at Twentieth and South streets, was laid with impressive ceremonies at 3 p. m. Sunday. The new structure will be of modern Romanesque style of architecture and will face east. The total cost of the building and furnishings will be between $65,000 and $70,000 when completed. It will accommodate an audience of 350 people not including the gallery over the vestibule. It is expected that the first floor will be ready for use September 1 and the contract calls for completion of the building December 1.

Roy V. Pepperberg, vice president of the board of trustees, presided over the services in the absence of William Gold, president of the board of trustees. A telegram from Mr. Gold, who is in New York city, expressing his regret at being unable to attend was read by Mr. Pepperberg. The opening prayer was made by Rev. M. Medvedoff, of Congregation Tefereth Isreal. An anthem, "The Heavenly Shepherd," by Howard Kirkpatrick, was sung by the choir, consisting of Miss Vera A. Upton, Mrs. R. O. Hummel, Homer Compton and James C. Reid. Morris Friend, chairman of the finance committee, spoke on "Our Offerings." He said that it had been thirty years since the first temple was built and urged the congregation to lend full support to the building committee so that they would be able to carry out the original plans and not be obliged to cut out parts and injure the beauty and usefulness of the structure. M. Weil, chairman of the building committee, spoke briefly on "Our Edifice."

A list of the articles enclosed in the receptacle which was sealed within the cornerstone was read by Nathan Gold. This included:

List of members of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun; list of contributors to the building fund; list of members of the Sisterhood; list of contributors to the ladies fund raised by Mrs. Nathan Gold; list of officers of the congregation; list of officers of the Sisterhood; list of junior congregation members; list of children and the teachers of the religious school; cradle roll (children in the congregation below kindergarten age); newspapers—local—account of the breaking of ground and the laying of the cornerstone; picture of breaking of ground (M. Weil, Mrs. Gugenheim and Rabbi Singer); program of laying of the cornerstone; list of the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity; constitution of congregation B'nai Jeshurun, incorporated October 5, 1884, Lincoln, Neb.; pamphlet—The Silver Anniversary, September, 1918, containing a historical sketch of the congregation written by M. A. Newmark, with an insert bringing the account up to date—1923 by the author. Reprint of conference lecture: "The Pre-Eminence of the Synagog in the Life of Israel," by Rabbi Jacob Singer, delivered before the central conference of American Rabbis in 1916 (with the Biblical verse from Jeremiah, chapter 32:15), "Take these deeds, this deed of the purchase, both that which is sealed, and this deed which is open, and put them in an earthen vessel; that they may continue many days." Committee on selection of location for new temple. R. V. Pepperberg, chairman; Henry Blum, Herman Speier, Sam Nefsky, M. Wasserman.

The box was placed in the stone by M. Weil and Roy Pepperberg handled the trowel in laying the stone. He was assisted by Mr. Weil, Herman Speier, Eugene Levi and Nathan Gold. This was followed by the raising of the American flag and the singing of America.

M. A. Newmark told of the history of the B'Nai Jeshurun congregation. He said that the site of the present temple was bought in 1885, but it was not until eight years later that a movement was made to erect the building. At that time there were twenty-eight members of the congregation. Shortly after the project was started a financial panic swept the country, but despite this disadvantage the structure was completed a few days before the fall holidays of 1893. The membership had become decreased to twenty-two however, and it was impossible to engage the services of a regular minister. Rabbi Franklin of Omaha was prevailed upon to devote a portion of his time to the new temple and Omaha rabbis continued this arrangement until 1906 when it was decided to engage a regular minister. Rabbi I. I. Mattuck was the first to take the B'nai Jeshurun congregation as a regular charge.

Mr. Pepperberg spoke on, "Our Future." He said that the future is based upon what we do today. If we deposit a proper "today" in our cornerstone, he believed, we need not worry about the future. He said there need be no fear for the immediate future as both today and tomorrow were safe in the keeping of the chief cornerstone, Rabbi Jacob Singer.

Rabbi Singer said in part: "The greatest task and opportunity of man lies in the building of altars. It promotes the highest form of human enterprise. The best efforts of the highest type of architects, bards, sculptors, and musicians have been inspired in the symbolism of worship. However altar building in souls and not in stone is the Israelite's ideal."

"The cornerstone of life is religion. Half the world sings Jewish songs, written by Jews, prays Jewish prayers, and reads Jewish literature, the Bible. The Jew thruout the ages has appeared in three different roles. In ancient times, he was a prophet, in the middle ages he took the part of a martyr and today having outlived his persecutors, he is a servant of God."

The new temple will be a two story building with a dome. The basement or first floor will extend eight feet above the ground and will be used as an institutional or community center. This will include an assembly room with stage and footlights, two dressing rooms and a kitchen where supper can be prepared for two hundred people. The auditorium for worship will take in the entire second floor. Services of the congregation will be suspended this month and will be resumed September 1 when it is expected the first floor will be ready for use.

The procession was led by Dr. Benjamin D. Scott, marshal of the day, and Rev. A. J. Croft, chaplain of the services. Chancellor I. B. Schreckengast and Reverend John Warren Fast, Deans F. A. Alabaster and B. E. McProud followed. Faculty, senior and alumni made up the rear. University officials wore caps and gowns with the brilliant colors of their order in the hoods. CLASS SERMON IS PREACHED

DR. WALTER AITKEN GIVES ADDRESS FOR HIGH SCHOOL.

Two Hundred and Eighty-five Graduates Attend St. Paul Methodist Church in Body.

The class sermon for the Lincoln high school graduating class was preached at St. Paul M. E. church Sunday morning by Dr. Walter Aitken, pastor of the church. The class of two hundred and eighty-five members attended in a body. Special seats were reserved for them in the front pews and the class marched into the main auditorium from the basement, where they had congregated.

Dr. Aitken in his sermon on "The Measure of a Life," said in part:

"Human life is enriched by its untold capacity for beauty, growth, variety, reproduction, resistance to death, continuity and eternity.

"In the realm of instinct the lower forms of life move in unvarying spheres. Man alone by conscious ambition and effort transforms ideals and changes circumstances, because he is related to a higher order of beings.

"In order to correct certain impressions which seem to obtain in the life of the present there are two preliminary considerations which I wish you to observe:

"First. The measure of a life is not determined by its years. Length of days should refer to direction rather than duration; attitude rather than attainment. A life may be as long as Methuselah's and as worthless; as short as Christ's and almost as sublime. Years do not always imply the accumulation of wisdom. Men do not always learn by experience. Life is not always a movement upward; sometimes it is a descent into folly. The most pathetic thing to be seen is a young man who has crossed the dead line at twenty years of age, while the most inspiring thing is to see a man of seventy retain a youthful spirit.

Second: The measure of a life is not determined by material possessions. Character not things is the real asset. The consciousness of this truth led Benjamin Franklin to refuse a much needed fortune and he declared that he would rather live on bread and water and sleep on the floor, than degrade his press to personal hatred or party passion for a more luxurious living.

"Who are the world's greatest men? Homer, Socrates, Columbus, Copernicus, Luther and Moses. Yet, not among them can we find a rich man. England thought to do Tennyson honor by making him a lord and bestowing on him titles of nobility, but the greatest honors that a nation could bestow upon him were cheap tawdry compared to the wealth of his mind, and the treasure he chanted for the enrichment of the world's thought.

"The real measure of a man is the symmetrical development of every part of his psychical being—intellect, affections and will.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD

SPECIAL SERMON FOR G. A. R. AT UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

Old Soldiers, Sons of Veterans and Others Hear Address of Rev. Mr. Woodburn.

Memorial services for the Grand Army of the Republic and affiliated organizations were held at the United Presbyterian church at Sixteenth and R streets, Sunday morning. The memorial sermon was preached by Rev. S. W. Woodburn. Special music was provided and the church was decorated with flags. The church was packed for the service, old soldiers and Sons of Veetrans and members of the W. R. C. and others attending. Rev. Mr. Woodburn said in part.

"In working out His plans God uses agents. The invisible God uses visible agents in working out His plan of the ages. We will mention but three of those agencies.

"He uses men. The history of Israel reveals that great fact. Moses was the apparent agent in the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage, but we know that God was the deliverer and Moses was His agent. In a marvelous way God has used men in building and exalting our own nation. At once we think of Washington, Lincoln, and other great national heroes. But back of those individuals God was the moving power.

"But God uses wars in working out His world plan. There is much agitation for peace. But there is little hope of universal peace as the world now stands. In a marvelous way our armies have been used in times past. He has set before our nation great fundamental principles and men have stood boldly for those principles. Our meeting today in this special service is to honor the memory of those great men and women. Many of your comrades fell on yonder battle fields, but the Union was preserved and we believe God's will was done. Many of your comrades have since passed from the scenes of earth. The ranks are rapidly being depleted. To you and to those who have passed we owe great debt.

"You have preserved the union, but more, you have set us a great example of loyalty and devotion. All honor to the memory of those who have gone. All honor and respect to those who remain to this present time.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Heavy Hearts.

Fate played into Treman's hands, however, for—tho her glance seemed to deliberately meet that of Miles Holden—in reality she did not see him, tho the latter thought she had, and of set purpose turned her gaze away from him!

It was as tho someone had deliberately slapped his face!

"She has cut me dead. What an infernal idiot I was, to come on such a wild-goose chase!" he told himself, unhappily. He understood Warwick Treman's action perfectly. The latter believed that all was fair in love and war, and was only behaving according to his rights.

But Marcella, of all people . . . . ! It was incredible and cruel!

One often hears that in matters of the heart there is a definite telepathy.

Be that as it may, some of Miles Holden's restlessness and pain seemed to have communicated itself to Marcella.

She was "distraite" all the long afternoon, and in the evening, on returning from the dining car, was thankful to note that the darkey porter had turned the coach into a "sleeper," having miraculously pulled down upper berths, worked various sliding arrangements, arranged bedclothes and fixed the curtains in their place.

"But how very odd!" thought she, pondering on the strange publicity of this scheme. "Must I sleep all night just a few inches away from strange men, with only this curtain between us?"

A large, cigar-scented gentleman, having already removed his boots, his collar, and his tie, informed her that he had the upper berth, above her own, and that he, too, wished to turn in early. He climbed the ladder, "just like a rooster entering the coop," thought Marcella, and landed with a thud above her head.

She was amused. She drew their joint green curtains, buttoning her own half down the middle, and proceeded with great difficulty to undress, on top of the narrow berth.

An electric light and a tiny strip of mirror were set between the windows. Marcella could not sit upright without bumping her head on the upper berth, from which came noisy croakings as the fat party went thru a similar process of undressing!

"Lammit! My watch and keys have fallen!" he exclaimed wheezily, as something skimmed floorwards. "Say! Could you pass 'em up to me?"

Marcella undid a couple of the curtains' buttons and peered out. An intimate garment of the upstairs gentleman had also fallen out, and she was rather glad when a passer-by rescued all three and restored them to their rightful owner!

She switched her light off, but she could not sleep. People were going up and down the passage, brushing her curtains, talking. Thru a chink between the partition and her curtain at the bed-head, she could glimpse them. They were mostly men, and some of them in "deshabille."

From behind other curtains, here a foot protruded, kicking off a boot or sock; there an arm, rescuing fallen property; once a pair of trousers dropped out to the aisle.

Then presently there was quietness, save for rhythmic snores!

The train bumped and rattled onwards, sometimes with great crashes that made Marcella think an accident had happened.

Lying in her berth, she thought incessantly of Miles. Where was he? Did he ever give a thought to her?

There had been a vague rumor of his coming to this country, on a second visit. But the rumor had not been confirmed.

If only she had trusted him! Why, why had she not made a breast of her predicament regarding Warwick Treman, believing that Miles would understand?

Presently she turned on the reading light and propping herself on one elbow, read and for a while sought to turn her mind away from herself, with the study of other people's happiness.

It was a charming story, told in exquisite prose, and not unlike Marcella's own shattered romance. Here, however, the situation was reversed, and it was the woman who "trusted not." Marcella found herself sympathizing with the heroine, and in turn with Miles, who had found the circumstantial evidence too damning to retain unshaken faith in her. Poor Miles! How she had loved him—how she still loved him, and always would, even tho some day in the near future, she would become the wife of another man.

It was too late now. The thing had gone too far. She must go thru with it.

Tears of sheer misery gathered in her eyes and dropped upon the pillow.

Miles was engaged to the smart, chic, clever Leonie Day, and apparently contented with his bargain. Leonie was so different from Marcella. Leonie was hard, keen, where Marcella was soft, yielding, trustful. Leonie's clothes were a symbol of her personality—smart, sophisticated, utterly shorn of fripperies, or feminine devices—while Marcella dressed in the charming girlish styles that best suited her. Women smiled appreciatively when they saw Marcella—they trusted her instinctively, while their eyes narrowed, and grew wary at the approach of the wily Leonie. Long since he had forgotten all about Marcella. . . .

Had she but known it, in the next coach to her own, a sleepless, equally unhappy Miles was turning the vexed problem of their mutual "engagements" over and over in his mind, with a heart as heavy as her own!

Another fine installment tomorrow.

SHERIFF SHOT BY A DERANGED MAN

Will Osborn, Broken Bow, Becomes Crazed and Injures Two Men Before Subdued—Will Go to Asylum.

BROKEN BOW, Neb., May 27.—Will Osborn, carpenter, forty years old, apparently became mentally unbalanced and made an assault on Albert Smith, a drayman, Sunday, first using a knife, then a shotgun. The load from the gun struck Smith's hand. Dr. Pennington, Sheriff Talbot and the city marshals attempted to capture Osborn, who let them have the load from a double barrel shot gun, the sheriff receiving the most of it in his breast and neck.

Deputy Sheriff Creable immediately formed a posse to get the man, who had fled to a field near by. Dr. Pennington and former Deputy Sheriff Thompson succeeded in gaining Osborn's attention and after a lively tussel captured him. The sheriff's wounds are not considered serious. Osborn will be taken to the asylum at once.

Did Winter leave you with that tired feeling?

WINTER'S confinement, with its lack of pure air and sunshine, shows its effect in Spring. To be underweight, easily tired, listless, and have a poor appetite, indicates a weakened condition of the blood. Nature must have help—your blood is minus fighting strength! More red-cells mean cleaner, purer, richer blood. S. S. S. builds red-blood cells. It builds blood-power! That is what makes fighting blood. Fighting blood destroys impurities. It fights boils. It fights skin eruptions! It always wins! It builds nerve-power,—thinking power. It builds up run-down, tired men and women, beautifies complexions, and makes the flesh firmer. Stronger and more useful nerves depend on blood-power. S. S. S. will give you that greater endurance, energy and strength!

Mrs. Lizzie Pelmet, Crowell, Texas, writes: "I was in a run-down condition—had lost forty-four pounds in weight. Also suffered from pimples and blackheads. My druggist recommended S.S.S. It made me a new woman. I think S.S.S. to be the best medicine on earth."

Try it yourself. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size is more economical. Get a bottle today!

FORD AGAINST OLDEN RULES

NOT TO PLAY POLITICS AS POLITICIANS WISH.

May Be Offered Vice Presidential Nomination If He Will Do as He Is Told, Intimated in Democratic Circles.

By Lawrence Martin.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—If Henry Ford would play the game according to the rules democratic politicians lay down for him, he could have the democratic nomination for vice president in 1924.

Ford will refuse the vice presidential nomination if it is offered to hime.

He will refuse to play the political game according to any set of ancient rules made by party politicians.

He doesn't care a whoop for party loyalty or party services, or even for parties, by all of which the politicians set great store.

Democratic politicians are worried about the Ford for president movement, which their experienced observers tell them is sweeping the west and middle west. Publicly contemptuous toward Ford and his possibility, in private lead democratics have given earnest consideration to means of making Ford do one of two things. These are:

1. Establish himself as a "regular" democrat in good standing and by performing service for the party show himself entitled to party honors.

2. Eliminate himself for consideration as a democratic nominee.

They cannot figure out a way to do either, simply because Ford will not play politics the way the politicians are used to playing it.

Recognizing For's popular strength, various democratic candidates would like to make a deal with him to accept the vice presidential nomination. They have received no encouragement. Ford has said he is not interested in the presidency. The politicians do not believe him but they do know he is not interested in the vice presidency.

William Randolph Hearst's effort to hook his third party to the Ford popularity has gotten no where thus far. Indications are that Ford does not want to tie to any man or any movement that is cluttered up with "side-issues" like political revenge. In fact, if he gets into the presidential campaign, either as democratic nominee or as an independent, Ford will run on the most "unpopular" platform, and by means of the most unpopular methods ever seen in American politics, his friends say.

GANGSTER BAND HUNTED

Men Who Escaped With $45,000 Payroll Believed to Be in St. Louis Underworld.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—Authorities searched the recesses of St. Louis' underworld today for members of a notorious gangster band, who were believed to have participated in the holdup of the Staunton, Ill., postmaster, Saturday night, escaping with a $45,000 pay roll intended for the Mount Olive and Staunton Coal company.

Information came from Edwardsville, Ill., near the scene of the robbery, indicating several alleged members of the gang were seen in that city Saturday. Police ordered all known members of the gang rounded up.

The money, which was sent in cash from a St. Louis bank to meet the pay roll of the Illinois mine, was being transferred from the Wabash railroad station to the Staunton postoffice when five unmasked bandits intercepted G. A. Roberts, postmaster, and Harry Kuehnen, postal clerk, selected the mail pouch containing the cash and escaped toward St. Louis in an automobile.

The license number of the automobile, scribbled down by Roberts as the car speeded away, was said by St. Louis police to have been that issued to an automobile here, which was reported stolen April 16.

KILLED BY CORSET.

COMO, Italy.—(By Mail.)—A small wound caused by a broken bone caused the death of a beautiful twenty-year-old Italian girl named Dancelli, here. Dancelli became ill while dancing and fainted. A doctor found that a corset bone had broken and made a slight wound. The corsets were blue, to match her gown, and it was found that the bone was highly impregnated with prussic acid, which entering the blood caused death.

Your Problems
BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: What is the matter with the mothers-in-law? I would love mine, if she would let me, but she won't. She isn't even nice to me all the time when her son is around. I'd love to go to her as if she were my own mother, who is far away, but she holds me off.

I didn't commit any crime in marrying her son. I knew before I married him that my path would not be a pleasant one, because when he first took me to see her after we were engaged (and I made a trip across four states to visit her) he told me she didn't want him to be married. He was twenty-eight years old, too, and heaven knows any man should be married at least once by that time.

She was quite nice to me, then, but after we were married and came to this city to live she made life miserable for me. She thinks I don't save enough of his $50 a week salary. I know I can't seem to, and my father-in-law makes a little less than that and they have bought a home and have investments and have helped out their three children at various times in their lives. But she cannot realize that they have been established for years, that she has learned how to economize on little things, while I am fresh from an office. Time and again I have swallowed my pride and asked her just how she did things. The lordly way in which she answered me was almost too much to bear, but I did learn from her and I told her how grateful I was. Instead of making her feel more kindly toward me, she only told my husband that really I must have had few brains to start with.

Her married daughter lives just around the corner from her and she worships their child. It is three years older than mine and consequently, for mine is only six months old, has more cute tricks. But, oh, if she wouldn't always tell my husband how smart his little niece is and worry about our baby girl, with whom I will not let her play, for she is a scientifically reared baby. Mary, if it were not for my husband, who is just a little boy grown up, after all, I could never endure it. But he says, "Sweetheart, you two cannot understand each other—don't worry. You are first, but I daren't tell her that." And then we laugh togethed, thru my tears.

But, oh, if it were only otherwise.—Two years a Bride.

A. Your troubles are three-quarters imaginaryif your husband realizes the situation. The mother-in-law evil is due primarily to jealousy. The mother-in-law herself may not realize this, but it is true.

Your husband's mother probably resents, too, your new method of rearing your baby. But when your little girl is older and can run about and play, I'm sure her grandmother will see as much to be proud of in her as in her older cousin.

I wouldn't be too meek, if I were you, in dealing with the mother-in-law. It is very well to placate her, but not to the extent that she thinks you will endure anything from her for the sake of peace. Define your rights in your own mind, stand upon them, not belligerently, but firmly. She will have a new respect for you.

Dear Mary Gordon: May I enter your column this will be my first time and hope its not the last. I have been a reader of your page ever since it started and I sure enjoy reading it very much.

Oh, but I sure love to read letters like Brute and Lincoln write. These supposed to be women and flapper haters.

I am what they call a flapper. I can get away with more stuff than Brutes.

(Old fashioned women) just because I am clever.

I'll bet if Brute and Lincoln were face to face with flapper they wouldn't say half such mean things and rake them down. I think flappers are alright. Every girl wants to be attractive so they paint and powder.

So do the boys.

I think it is perfectly alright for a girl to dress as she pleases. I am going to anyway. I think a girl with short dresses and bobbed hair looks neat and she doesn't look like an old fashioned woman or an old maid either. So come on girls and flappers let's stick for ourselves. I will be a flapper just as long as I please and just as long as anyone else.

(Cause I am a man hater) I will not be weak. I will never fall in love. I will remember that men are without (conscience) or charity. I will forbid myself the association of men, or the acquaintance of men. I hate men. I hate them. I hate the way they stare and I hate the thoughts I read in their eyes.

There was one on the street car the other day.

He was a type of Brutes. I felt as if I were a cat and my fur bristling at the sight of him.

Another spoke to me as I left. I wished then I were a cat with claws and teeth. If all the men in the world except my father were driven out and killed that would be better. it would be happy place. There wouldn't be so many downfalls for the girls. Is there to be any relief ever. Am I always to be haunted and watched?

Who was it wrote about the Alaskan dog being watched greedily and hungrily by teammates ready to tear it to pieces when it falls from exhaustion.

Are men like that?

I believe it. Man is like a blind dog in a meat house.

Girls and flappers beware yourselves of men. Listen girls and flappers. We might like their ties but remember our mothers married regular guys. Mary Gordon I sure will thank you very much to see this letter in print. Mary I am a high school girl, and what would be the best to get for your teacher's birthday present.—The Man Hater.

P. S.: Am I welcome to write again?

A. My, my, such a little misanthrope!

I began to worry about you until I came to the end where you said you were in high school. And then I just smiled wisely to myself and said, "She'll recover."

Some men are horrid, of course, but it's easy to ignore that sort—there are so many nice ones.

Your teacher would probably like a book by her favorite author, or a handkerchief you made yourself or a box of candy.

The key to the column door will be hanging outside for you, whenever you care to return.

Dear Mother Gordon: I just had to write and tell the Flapper that her ideas of a flapper were just as bad off as Brutes. Brute was telling what he thought but every word that the flapper wrote was bunk every bit of it. She even went so far as to say she would rather be a mummy. She knows she got that from The Journal and where King Tut was resurrected she will be saying something about the big little family next.

Well King Tut or rather the flapper you had better think it over about Brute having queer ideas for they are not near so queer as yours.

Mary you have got the rest of them beat for what they know. I will be back again if you don't object.—Fresh From N. Y.

A. Each one has his own idea on the subject, some radical, some mild, some sensible.

Glad to have you return.

Dear Mary Gordon: I think a home should be furnished to live in and use and not with too many things to just look at.

It is nice to have a room for the children where they can do as they please with their play-things and another don't have the responsibility of keeping it straight.

Parents should begin early to correct so they won't have to punish so severely or often. Children should be taught to work if they never have to for they will know how it should be done and have something to fall back on if misfortune comes their way.

Little accidents that happen sometimes are not thru carelessness and children should not be scolded too much for them.

A good economy is to guard their health. If children are nervous, find out the cause and correct it.

Children should be taught to appreciate childnood and to respect old age.

Parents should never be too old to be pals of their children, and give them advantages they were deprived of.

A good plan is to have mother and daughter work together in preparing for company and if the company is young let mother wait on them, and if the company is older let the daughter wait on them.

Fathers should be worthy of the confidence and respect of their sons.

Making home happy is easy when we realize that we are not in this world just for ourselves but for others too, and children are taught the same.—Mrs. C. S.

A. The column is always glad to receive suggestions from experienced mothers and housekeepers. We thank you.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Way Madge Managed to "Get on with" Bess Dean.

I IGNORED the sneering intimation in Bess Dean's voice that I was presumptuous to attempt the concoction of one of Mrs. Durkee's favorite dishes.

That she would indulge herself in every possible pin prick during our enforced association in my former neighbor's kitchen, I had known when I entered it. I knew also that she counted upon my forbearance and hatred of a scene to protect her in her propensity for stiletto-like jabs. Otherwise she would have been upon her best behavior, for from her reference to keeping my hands off, and smothering my painful sense "of duty," I guessed that she distinctly feared my interference with the flirtatious little game she was playing in the Durkee household.

"Mrs. Durkee's cooking is the inspired gift of a genius," I assented cordially, with the mental resolution that I would not permit her to get a rise out of me. "But she taught me how to make this particular dish, and I'll try not to make her blush for her pupil. Have you finished—paring the potatoes?"

"Just," she replied a bit sulkily. "What next, oh! Queen of the Gas Stove?"

"Just turn them into the colander and set it under the cold water faucet," I directed imperturbably. "I'll be ready for them in a minute."

Bess Dean Helps Efficiently.

I am familiar with the arrangement of Mrs. Durkee's kitchen, and as she is one of the most orderly little women living, I was able to put my hand immediately upon the things I wanted. I brought to her big porcelain-topped kitchen, table a casserole, two large bowls, a pitcher of milk, a dish containing butter, another full of flour and shakers with pepper and salt. Bess Dean eyed my preparations with a sardonic eye.

"Pity you only have one pupil for your demonstration," she gibed.

"More would make me nervous," I responded imperturbably, carrying the two bowls to the sink. "Now, if you'll just drain those potatoes into this bowl, and cover them with cold water, while I fill this one, we can get to work."

She threw me a swift, shrewd glance, and, I think, realized that for the present occasion at least my poise was proof against her attempts to annoy me. At any rate, she gibed no more, but helped me swiftly and efficiently through the preparation of the dinner.

Indeed, she went further, and harking back to reminiscences of our teaching days together at Bayview, voiced such characteristic and humorous comment upon residents of that village whom we both knew, that I insensibly found myself amused at her chatter.

"I'm a Trifle Dizzy."

There can be no more entertaining companion than Bess Dean, when she sets her really brilliant mentality to work in that direction, and if it had not been for the thought of Leila Durkee, I actually should have enjoyed the hour we spent together.

There is no real wickedness in Bess Dean such as is to be found in the souls of Grace Draper and Rita Brown. Inordinate vanity, cattiness, the desire to "get even" with any one who deservedly or undeservedly triumphs over her—these are her worst traits, and make her a dangerous person to cherish as a friend.

In all our encounters—a warfare never openly recognized—I have come off signally victorious, however, and I never would permit the memory of any unpleasantness between us to mar our amicable association. But I could not forgive the sacrifice of Leila Durkee's feelings which I guessed Bess Dean was offering up to her own vanity and her desire to strike at me through my friendship for Alfred Durkee's gentle wife and I steeled my brain and heart against the girl's real powers of fascination.

She should not throw dust in my eyes with her apparent friendliness. I promised myself grimly, even as I laughed and jested with her, and I meant to relax no whit of my intended watchfulness over her during the coming evening.

My thoughts went anxiously to Leila Durkee. She would have no inkling of Bess Dean's presence until her homecoming. That she was in an exceedingly nervous state, I knew from my observations of her at our jazz party of the night before. I knew I could not answer for her perfect poise if she should suddenly come upon the girl who was making her so miserable. Yet how to warn her?

With a sudden inspiration, I leaned heavily against the wall and put my hand to my eyes.

"I'm a trifle dizzy, Bess," I said mendaciously. "Oh, it's nothing to be alarmed about! But if you'll see to things here, I'll go upstairs and lie down for a minute or two."

THE HOME KITCHEN

Six Interesting and Novel Recipes for "Odd" Dishes

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

ODD dishes always arouse the family curiosity and are real fun to make once in a while, especially when they are inexpensive and not troublesome to concoct or cook.

String Bean Soup.

Wash and cut fine, after stringing three pints of green string beans. Boil until very tender, then drain and put them through a puree sieve. Take a pint of the bean water and a pint of milk, the juice of an onion, pepper, salt. Boil up and thicken with a little butter and flour rubbed to a paste. Add a teaspoonful of sugar and the beans. Reheat, but do not boil. Diced bread fried in butter, then drained on brown paper may be sprinkled over the top of the soup.

Portuguese Pork.

Take two heavy pork tenderloins. Open them, but do not split them way through. Lay the meat in a dish that is deep and cover with a marinade made of six sliced garlic buds, a sliced onion, two bay leaves, a few savory herbs, pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of mixed spices, a dozen raisins and eight cloves. Then turn over a cupful of white wine vinegar and press down with a weight. Keep in a cool place and turn the meat three times a day for three days. When ready, drain the meat and fry it in butter. Strain the marinade and thicken it slightly with cornstarch. Lift the meat to a hot dish and garnish with toast sippets and sliced oranges. Serve the sauce in a hot sauceboat.

Ham Savouries.

Take two cupfuls of minced boiled ham and add to it a teaspoonful each of grated onion, minced pepper and sugar. Add a tablespoonful of minced celery leaves, three tablespoonfuls of peanut butter, pepper, a little salt and a cupful of thin cream sauce. Mix well, add two tablespoonfuls of crumbs. Fill buttered ramekins with the mixture and bake a delicate brown. Serve broiled or Lincoln potatoes with the savouries.

Fried Sandwiches.

Cut medium slices of bread into squares and cut off all the crusts. Have ready a little minced ham seasoned with a little grated cheese, mustard, pepper and enough cream to make a paste. Dip half the slices in milk, then spread with the ham and cover with the other slices sandwich fashion. When ready dip each sandwich in beaten egg and fry a delicate brown on both sides in butter. Serve garnished with sprays of fresh watercress.

Baked Sandwiches.

Open and drain a can of sliced pineapple. Dip the slices in egg, then in fine crumbs. Make a filling of a cupful of minced ham, pepper, a tablespoonful of minced capers, a teaspoonful of minced peppers and a little cream to soften the paste. Spread half the slices with the mixture, then cover sandwich fashion with the other slices. Lay the sandwiches in a buttered baking-pan and bake 10 minutes covered. Then uncover and cook until delicately browned. Serve garnished with sprays of fresh watercress.

Russian Pudding.

Cream together half a cupful of sugar and three-quarters of a cupful of butter. Add three beaten eggs, 1½ cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a saltspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat, then divide in three parts. Color one pink, [illegible] with the [illegible] of bitter chocolate, a milk and [illegible] the other. Decorate a pudding mold [illegible] add the batter in layers. Cover and steam two hours. Serve with a sauce.

THERE'S a key to every door, no matter how big or how little it may be. There's a combination to every locked place. There's a wish, a hope, a determination to unlock every secret. Even the door that's shaped like a heart—even the secret that has a heart hidden in it somewhere—even THE heart, itself—will open to the right key, if that key is held by the right MAN!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Making a House a Home

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

WHAT is it that makes Sue Graham's house so beautifully comfortable and so tasteful and unexpected? Visiting there, I felt the charm, and, now that I am home again, I've set my wits to work to see if I can make out the secret which is surely the property of Sue.

In the first place, Sue is independent. Sue designed her own window curtains, and gave the final touch which made the curtains just perfect in the house and the place where they hung. And that is one of the main things which count so much in Sue's house. You feel that these window curtains just belong where they are, and you know that they are an inspiration of the bonny mistress of the house.

It has made me feel again the little current of regret which sometimes runs through my ungrateful veins and almost crimples in my nerves when I hear the name "Interior Decorator." Not every person who adopts this name and business is competent. Without doubt, most are good and tasteful people. I know of one or two who are real benefactors to their race. But the heavy hands of overpersuasive members of the profession are sometimes too much in evidence in the homes of the rich and the would-be right-up-to-date.

Individuality Is Needed

Now, interior decorators have troubles of their own, of course. They must live up to the fashion of the day and turn out gray rooms or brown rooms or blue rooms and all sorts of painted and strangely finished furniture upon adamant demand. Also they must fight for their plans and modify them until all the originality they so carefully put into them is stripped away.

But there also is a side to the plight of the home owner. Who does not know the woman who deeply desires a blue room in her upstairs domain, but who cannot have it because some decorator tells her it "isn't done"?

Now, I think that woman should have her blue room or pink room or purple room, if she really wants it. Why have a house if you cannot have at least one room in it your own way and in the colors you like?

Every house should have individuality in it. The satisfactory home is the one showing the taste, the likes and the loves of its inhabitants.

Books are to some of us the necessary occupants of every inhabited room in a home. But there are men and women who never read a book, and who would stack up in such houses unread, unopened books.

Beyond a few volumes for possible guests, the houses of people who do not read should be free from books. That is one way of showing reality, genuine freedom from the rule of the big majority who think they must have books because most big and fashionable houses have libraries.

There is nothing much more dreary than one of these libraries, the shelves filled by orders on the booksellers: "Send me so many feet of books that are beautifully bound."

There the lonely volumes stand, year by year, on the shelves, and their state of stiff, perfect order shows they have never felt the touch of a book lover or of a delighted reader.

I know of one house which perfectly reflects the character and tastes of its owner. It is full of books, but there isn't a picture of any kind in it.

The ceilings are low, and the walls are covered with a grayish brown, with curtains which let in, yet soften, the light. The people in this home are of moderate means and they must have books.

Homes of Personality

As for pictures, they care little for any but the very best; and as they cannot afford what they like in pictures, they go without, and have most of their comfort as to material things in their books.

It is a house full of personality. No one misses pictures in this house, or, if they do, they set the fact down to the genuine taste of their hosts and their perfect freedom from the bonds of custom, so far as their home furnishing goes.

Liberty of action could not be found in reality if any thought of the ruling furniture and interior decorator were to enter into the practical calculations of these people who make of their home such a calm, serene region of life as reveals their own character and tastes to the delight of all comers.

It is worth while to be real. To have some part of your life which does not merely reflect from outside what isn't interesting to you—ah, that's as important as being in the latest style!

Advice to Girls — By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:
I am a girl of 18. I was out riding the other night with a young man friend with whom I was not very well acquainted, and unchaperoned. I would like to be a friend of his, although I know he did wrong. Please advise me.

CIGARETTE.

He said he loved me and had always loved me, but didn't let me know it till a few months ago. He went away and [illegible] me a card, but I haven't received any word from him as yet. I wouldn't cause any trouble in his family for anything, but want his friendship and consideration. What I mean by consideration is that he will let me know [illegible].

What to Remember About Food in Hot Weather

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

THERE is such a thing as overdoing the restriction of food in summer. It's wise to refrain from eating too heavily during hot weather, but too many persons cut down their diet to the danger point. As a result, they are likely to affect their ability to withstand the heat and to perform a good day's work.

We need just as much energy in hot weather as on cold days—more, perhaps, because in summer most people go in for more strenuous outdoor exercise. Therefore, while we should avoid overeating, we must be sure we are getting all the nourishment we need.

The salad habit is good, but not good enough. We need substantial nourishment during hot days—just as we do during blizzard days. It is dangerous to eliminate the protein foods in the summer because we need them to build up the tissues and to replace the tissue waste which is going on every minute of your life. We all need at least one good nourishing meal every day to keep us going.

"Cold cuts"—if they are properly prepared and served—are excellent hot weather dishes, as they are appetizing enough to please and nourishing enough to satisfy. They are also economical of time and money. They are made from the inexpensive cuts of meat which are much cheaper than those cuts we usually get for hot meals. Such cuts are just as nutritious as the more expensive ones. The chuck cuts are good for spiced beef—the plate, rump and brisket cuts cannot be beaten for delicious corned beef.

There are lots of attractive ways of serving meat in summer. There are all kinds of corned-beef dishes. Beef salad with good dressing, is excellent. Beef heart is nutritious and may be served cold sliced or minced. Glazed cold meats are easy to make and easy to eat. Cold meat soups and broths and well-flavored jelly soups are very refreshing.

Girls, particularly, are inclined to overdo the light summer diet because they are inclined to select foods with insufficient nourishment anyway. Summer seems to be a good excuse for wafer-like sandwiches and sodas. As a result, resistance is lowered and the energy production is below normal needs.

Remember that you require nourishing food in the summer as much as at any other time.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, MAY 29.

A very quiet day is to be read from this day's lunar transits, although the mutual aspects point to affairs moving in the customary grooves in trade and commerce. It would be an especially favorable day for attending to correspondence or to those matters requiring publicity or printing. There may be some slight obstacles to overcome.

Those whose birthday it is may find things moving in the accustomed grooves without anything out of the routine. It should be a good year for writing and publishing. A child born on this day may be expected to be clever, versatile and studious and should succeed through its own talents.

Why Not Plan a New Coiffure for Summer Beauty?

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

ABOUT the time the warm months come, women seem to feel a restless longing to make some changes in their appearance, just by way of variety.

I think it's really the change in the face of Mother Nature that starts our longing. The green grass and the budding flowers have added so much to her [illegible] that we [illegible] feel the need of adding to our beauty, too.

If you are careful about your warm weather diet and eat plenty of fresh green vegetables, you should have a healthy bloom to your complexion and an attractive sparkle in your eyes.

Now, there's another thing which makes an interesting change and often a very welcome one.

That is the way you do your hair. You know, when summer comes you are likely to be without a hat more than in winter. And about this time, too, you are very likely to long for a change in the way you do your hair.

How often you hear women say: "If only I could fix my hair a different way. I'm so tired of the old one, but I can't think of anything different!"

Now, I want to whisper in your ear that if you are planning ever to change [illegible] now is the propitious time to do it.

In the first place, changes in fashion, and changes from the bobbed style back to longer hair, have given much room for experiment and individuality in the way you do your hair.

And you who have had short locks and are now letting them grow longer [illegible] interested to know that the [illegible] which reveals the shape of your head is by far the smartest and newest.

[illegible] is easy, for you can pull it all back to the nape of your neck, roll it up and with a few deft touches stick in [illegible] to hold it there.

With this arrangement it doesn't matter if your hair is very short. In fact, shorter hair is much easier to arrange [illegible] long. [illegible] women whose [illegible] would [illegible] cut off to a length [illegible] shoulders because it is so much easier to arrange and really looks better.

Here are a few general rules which may help you in finding a new hair arrangement that will accent your beauty.

First of all, study your profile carefully, and when trying new arrangements view each one from every angle. A good way is simply to take an evening off and find the [illegible] that you want to do your hair for greater becomingness.

When pulling it back from your face, whether you are parting it on the side or in the middle, make your part, and then pull each side back [illegible] at once. The fewer [illegible] necessary [illegible] you make, the better.

After [illegible] you [illegible].

Another [illegible] you need, but put them in carefully so [illegible] will be more [illegible] better [illegible] enough [illegible].

[illegible]

Another note of interest to the woman who has decided that she will keep her [illegible] bobbed hair [illegible]. The [illegible].

Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

Illustrated by Neva Harrison

A FOOLISH LITTLE FISH.

MY goodness, but Timmy Shad was excited! In the first place he had wandered from his home back in the very mouth of the river out into the ocean. He had often been told by his mother and friends that the ocean was no place for young fish. But Timmy Shad, like a great many little children, always found great pleasure in doing the things he knew he shouldn't. This was the first time he had ventured so far from home, and when the waters around him became black, Timmy Shad trembled.

"Gracious! I do believe the world is coming to an end!" he sobbed, but the water was so dark he couldn't see his way home, and all he could do was to swim around in the same spot and cry. "I wish I had never ventured out so far. I want my mother," and real fish tears filled Timmy Shad's eyes and rolled down the sides of his face.

"Why don't you go home?" asked a strange voice, and Timmy Shad jumped like a jack-in-the-box, as a great sea fish swished by him. "I'd eat you myself if it weren't for your many bones."

Timmy Shad waited for nothing. He darted through that black water, but the further he went, the darker the water seemed to grow.

"I know. I'll go and tell the king." And Timmy Shad started off in the direction he felt sure the king must live.

Soon he came to a crowd of fishes, and, of course, they stopped and asked the cause of his hurry.

"Stay and play with us," they begged.

"You won't have much time to play or do anything else," cried Timmy Shad. "The world is coming to an end."

"Coming to an end!" cried the leader of the fish school. "What do you mean?"

"Why, that the water will all dry up and we'll find ourselves flopping out on dry land," replied Timmy Shad, all excited and almost out of breath.

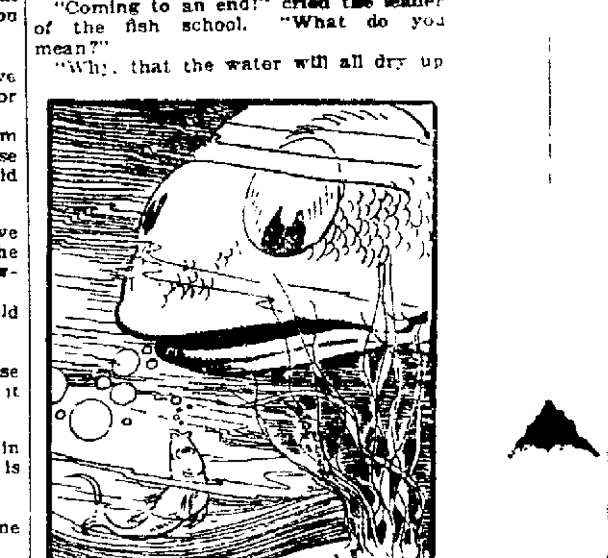

"But who told you? How do you know?" asked the leader.

"Why!" And Timmy Shad turned around and pointed back toward the way he had just traveled. "I was playing back yonder when all of a sudden the very waters all around me turned as black as a thunder-cloud and the sky above was as bright as could be. Yes, sir, the water was as black as ink."

"Ho, ho, ho!" laughed all the fish together, and Timmy Shad wished he hadn't come to warn them.

"You poor foolish little fish," cried the leader of the fish school. "Didn't you know what that was? Well," when Timmy Shad shook his head, "that's because your mother raised you in the fresh water. That is the way Mr. Cuttlefish, our good neighbor, has of frightening his enemies. You see, he has no other way of self-defence, so he throws out this dark-colored liquid and it makes the waters around him black, and he scoots away while his pursuer gets lost in the darkness. You'd better go back to the mouth of the river where you belong, and go to school before you venture so far away from home or you'll be frightened at your own shadow."

At this all the fish began to laugh and jeer, and Timmy Shad, forgetting about his visit to the king, turned around and scooted back home, where he started to school at once.

CLUB WORK UNDER WAY

BOYS AND GIRLS GATHER AT THE STATE FARM.

Two Hundred and Fifty Young People Who Excelled in Home Clubs Guests of Extension Department.

Two hundred fifty Nebraska boys and girls who excelled in Boys and Girls Club demonstrations in 1922 are gathering at the Agricultural college campus for the eighth annual club week. All of these boys and girls are between ten and eighteen years of age. For many of them, this is the first trip away from home. The entire agricultural extension force was busy today making the shy little youngsters feel at home and organizing the large number into groups for the week's work.

The boys and girls were met at the trains by guides wearing badges similar to the ones which had been mailed to the boys and girls. They registered at the club office immediately after arriving at the campus and were given a card to write home to tell the folks of their safe trip. They were then weighed and measured for it is one aim of the club week to send the children back home in as good or better condition than when they come in.

After receiving instructions for the day's program they were turned over to the University 4-H Club, an organization of former club members who are now university students. These university students showed the strangers about the campus and thru every department in every building. Games were started this afternoon by the club folks to keep the youngsters from getting homesick and to get them well acquainted with each other.

The boys and girls will make the first raid on the Ag Cafeteria tonight when they hold the first "fill up" session at 6:15. Immediately afterward they will gather on the campus to witness the beautiful pageant "The Masque of Conservation" played by the agricultural college students at the recent farmers fair. An address of welcome by Dean E. A. Burnett and a talk by Rev. P. C. Johnston will make up the evening's program before the tired little strangers turn into their new beds on the campus.

Organization of these visitors into groups and final assignment of the work to the different helpers will be the big job today for those in charge of the week. Six divisions will be made in both the boys and girls groups. Squad leaders will be in charge of groups thruout the day and night leaders will tuck the kids in and get them out in the morning.

Breakfast and lunch at noons will be obtained at the Ag Cafeteria. Banquets will be tendered the visitors Tuesday evening by the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce and by the Omaha Chamber of Commerce Friday evening at Omaha. Picnic supper at Antelope park and dinner at the Ag Cafeteria will complete the "fill up" sessions.

Class room instruction will occupy the forenoons for the boys and girls until Friday. Trips around Lincoln will entertain them in the afternoons until Friday when they all catch the 7:45 train to Omaha. There, they will visit the packing houses, eat luncheon as guests of the Stock Yards Co. and visit the Omaha National Bank, the Telephone building, the W O A W broadcasting station, the swimming pool and the Omaha Chamber of Commerce. Saturday's program will be "Home We Go For More Club Work."

WESLEYAN SENIORS IN IVY DAY PROGRAM

Thousand Dollars Presented to Chancellor for Organ Fund at the Close of Exercises.

The annual senior Ivy day exercises of Wesleyan university were held Monday morning. The seniors in cap and gown occupied the pavilion of the university green. A large audience witnessed the Ivy day march by twelve senior girls in black caps and gowns and twelve junior girls in white frilled gowns with yellow caps and togas. The girls carried garlands of smilax and flowers. Neal Maricle as president of the senior class, presided. Dr. Benjamin B. Scott assisted as class sponsor and the class poem was read by Miss Dorothy LaSelle. The Ivy day orator, Richard Kellogg of University Place, spoke on "The Task of the Times." He said briefly:

"College life is the greatest experience the world has to offer. Unthought of fields new discoveries are here in college. The doors of the world are open to us and after college come friendships that last thru the years. Questions we are asked today are What is God. What is civilization, and is the world advancing?" From disasters arise triumphant victories. God, freedom, immortality survive thru the ages. Right conduct has its roots in the eternal. Simple faith in God will solve the problems of the age. Sin is a ravenous beast, to be slain ere it slays us. We still have a war to win. The world war has passed into a moral and spiritual phase. The past of this generation lies in the secret warfare of the war of the immaterial against the material. We must create democracy underwritten by Christianity. The soul must be saved but so must society. The world needs today a divine splendor to eliminate its shadow."

Rev. [illegible] B. Schreckengast was called to the platform and presented with a gift of one thousand dollars by the president, Neal Maricle, on behalf of the class. It has become a custom at Wesleyan for the graduating class to make such a gift and in recent years it has been devoted to a fund for the organ in the Wesleyan auditorium. Chancellor Schreckengast responded with a few words of appreciation for the class and good wishes for the future.

A portrait of Chancellor Schreckengast was also presented to the university by the seniors. It was accepted by Dean F. A. Alabaster who spoke feelingly of his fine service for the university. The portrait will occupy a place in the hall of fame of the new library. Robert Shepard as president of the junior class was presented with the senior cap and gown by the senior president. Mr. Shepard spoke briefly after taking the cap and gown. The ivy was planted by the seniors.

STUDENT BEATEN UP.

DES MOINES, May 28.—Charging that a student masked mob kidnaped him, beat him with paddles, and then applied a coat of molasses, glue and feathers, Gordon Holler, eighteen, Omaha, freshman at Des Moines university, today sought to invoke Iowa's anti-mask law against two of his alleged assailants.

Holler filed charges of assault and battery at the same time against William Eaton, twenty, whom he accuses of leading the student mob.

The reason for the attack, Holler said he was told was that he "went with too many girls and was not complying with school regulations."

STROMSBURG YOUTHS ARE HEAVILY FINED

Boys Deny All But One Instance of Bootlegging and Are Fined $250 Each—Letter Writer Draws Ten Dollar Fine.

Protestations that they had never handled liquor but once apparently failed to convince Judge Munger when he heard Wilford Johnson and Dave Quick plead guilty Monday monring to a liquor conspiracy, and he fined them each $250, with jail as the alternative. The boys are from Stromsburg, and were arrested in York county in January with liquor in their car, and indicted by a grand jury last week. Their neighbors complain that they sold liquor for a man in Clarks all last year.

The only other person sentenced Monday was Carl W. Renner, who pleaded guilty to depositing an improper letter in a Burlington mail car at Plattsmouth, and was fined $10. His father was killed in a wreck and his mother died insane, and after brooding on his troubles a while the young man sent an abusive letter to Hale Holden, demanding double tracks for the Burlington everywhere. Judge Munger told him he had made a bad start, and warned him against letting his troubles undermine his common sense.

Floyd Drum pleaded guilty to liquor charges and was given a retroactive sentence covering the number of days he has already lain in jail.

Four other persons pleaded guilty to liquor conspiracies and will be sentenced June 4: William H. Hampton, Auburn; Rudolph J. Kreifels, Johnson county; Charles Franklin and Jackson Roliff.

Ray Meyers pleaded guilty to driving a stolen car from Falls City to Chicago and will be sentenced next week.

These persons pleaded not guilty to liquor conspiracy indictments: Fred Havel, Blaine Hunt, Charles Hadden, John Crees, Leonard Gardner, Charles Swan, Harry Carter, Rufus Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Clem Peacock. Harry Babcock indicted with Havel, Hunt and Hadden, did not appear for arraignment.

HUNTING FOR AMERICAN "TUT."

COLUMBUS, O., May 28.—Archaeologists are digging in the Ohio river "valley of the kings" for an American King "Tut." When they find him his trappings will exceed in splendor and the relics of his people will evidence a higher culture than the splendor and culture of the Egyptians three thousand years ago, according to Dr. William C. Mills, Ohio state university archaeologist. He believes relics are about to be unearthed in Ohio that would make the ancient Pharaoh, could he but see them, turn green with envy. Many treasures already dug up in this country surpass those of the Nile, Dr. Mills said.

CHARGE HIM AS A WOBBLY

MAN CONVICTED OF CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM FILES APPEAL.

Willard F. Powell Takes Full Six Months Allowed and Finally Asks Supreme Court to Pass on His Conviction.

On the very last day of grace granted him by the law for the purposes of appeal, Willard F. Powell, traveling delegate for the industrial workers of the world—better known as the I. W. W.—filed Monday with the supreme court his appeal from conviction in Scottsbluff county of criminal syndicalism. This is the first case of the kind that has reached that court since the law was passed a few years ago.

Powell appeared in the North Platte valley last summer, and started in to organize "wobblies" among the beet sugar workers and those engaged in cultivating sugar beets. He was arrested shortly afterwards and on November 28 was convicted and fined $500 by Judge Hobart.

The complaint charged that he openly advocate by word of mouth and affirmatively suggested the duty, necessity, propriety and expediency of crime, criminal syndicalism and sabotage, that he distributed and sold papers and documents to the same effect, that he openly justified the use of force and destruction of property, organized a society for this purpose and was himself a member of such an organization.

Powell admitted he was a traveling delegate and that he was paid $4 a day for the purpose of enrolling persons as members of the I. W. W. and that he had distributed literature. Among these was a song book of irreligious character and thoroly I. W. W. in character. He said that he had read only a part of the songs, but such as he had read he agreed with.

His attorney attacks the constitutionality of the law, and declares that the defendant committed no crime.

Thoreau was right when he said, "After a night's sleep the news is as indispensable as the breakfast." We are optimistic in the morning, ready to grapple with the problems of the day.

WILL TRY TO SAVE OLD PRESCOTT SITE

Chamber of Commerce Will Confer With Board of Education on Playground Proposal Made Monday.

The city planning subdivision of the chamber of commerce will attempt to save the old Prescott school site for a playground for the boys and girls of the city. On motion of A. R. Talbot Monday afternoon the playground committee was asked to confer with the Lincoln board of education relative to obtaining the vacant space for the use of the "kids."

Superintendent Lefler said that there is a "swap" on now between the school board and a real estate firm which contemplates an exchange of the old Prescott site at Twentieth and Sumner streets for a new location farther southeast. The exchange has under consideration property valued at approximately $14,500. The superintendent understood that the deal has not yet been completed.

A R. Talbot said that the old Prescott site should be purchased by the city or retained by the school board for playground purposes. The city has few places for the children except the streets where there is danger to life and limb After while, he pointed out, the city would be looking for playground and this would mean the buying of costly locations.

City Commissioner Cowgill was a guest of the subdivision at its regular meeting at the chamber of commerce Monday afternoon. The matter of changing the names of Lincoln streets was discussed Commissioner Cowgill said that the city would proceed along conservative lines.

City Commissioner Cowgill presented a plan for widening J street between Sixteenth and Eighteenth street before the subdivision. The plan proposed widening the street to provide a twenty feet parkway in the center and twenty feet of paving on each side of the parkway.

RECEIVER MAY COMPROMISE

Providng He Does It Properly and Obtains Sanction of Court.

Assistant Attorney General Lloyd Dort has given an opinion in reply to J. E. Whitney of Lincoln regarding the right of a bank receiver to compromise the double liability of stockholders of a failed bank. He says such a compromise has been sanctioned by the supreme court in the case of State vs. German Savings bank, 45 Neb. 416, but he believes it necessary for the receiver to make a separate showing in each individual stockholder's case before obtaining the court's order approving such a settlement. He thinks the courts are not likely to approve a settlement of a percentage applicable alike to all stockholders, some of whom might be entirely responsible and others entirely insolvent.

COUNCIL PUTS IT TO BIDDER

HOSPITAL CONSTRUCTION NOW ONE NOTCH NEARER.

Opening of Bids But Little More Than Two Weeks Off—Deputy City Clerk Poor Tenders His Resignation.

Mayor Zehrung introduced a resolution Monday authorizing the city clerk to advertise for bids for the new city hospital, these to be opened June 14 The resolution is based on City Engineer Bates' cost estimate of $250,000 for the Lincoln city hospital and the Emily J. Moore annex or $125,000 on the annex alone. These are not separate units. One wing is to be named for the widow of the late R E. Moore whose donation of $100,000 makes possible the building of the structure at this time. The residue of his estate, estimated at something near a half million, will be used for maintenance or rather the income from such residue.

Deputy City Clerk and Auditor Earl M. Poor tendered his resignation to take effect June 1. Mr. Poor will leave three days later with his wife for Los Angeles, their future home. They will motor to the coast, stopping at Denver, the grand canyon, Colorado Spring and other places. From Los Angeles, they will make an extended trip to northern California and will then return to settle down in their new home. Mr. Poor entered the city's employ as bookkeeper in the clerk's office in December, 1914. He has served as deputy for the past seven years. Mrs. Poor has taught in the Clinton school. Forrest W. Moeller, serving his sixth year as bookkeeper, is named to succeed the retiring deputy.

On recommendation of Mayor Zehrung, seventeen pool hall licenses were granted as follows:

Theodore Schwartz, 144 South Ninth.
J W Louder 225 South Thirteenth
E L. Story, 130 South Eleventh
L. R Lloyd, 224, North Tenth
J. P Saunders 211 North Ninth
Frank R. Hooper, 1425 O.
C E Schrayner, 227 North Tenth.
L. B. Frye, 206 South Twelfth
John Cunningham, 135 North Twelfth.
Phil Gartner, 1032 P.
Peter H. Larson 1422 O.
C N. Moon, 146 North Eleventh and 1115 P.
John A. Wood, 139 South Tenth.
William L. Bell, 1645 O
Matt Kobalter, 1454 O.
Hotel Lincoln
A H Ray and Henry Lev, 135 South Eleventh.

Eighteen halls have operated during the past year tho one of them was recently sold and is to be turned into a grocery. Successful applicants are all given renewals. A few years ago, there were twenty-six pool halls in the city. The mayor contends that seventeen is enough. He said that not one complaint has been made either to him or to the police department during the past year. He rejected the application of A. Angell who gave 2701 as the number of a desired pool hall location. The mayor assumes that the applicant has in mind the north side of O street, just west of Twenty-seventh. This site is to be occupied by a filling station.

"It is not the policy to grant pool hall licences in residential sections. I certainly should not recommend any application which has to do with a location removed from adequate police regulation," said the mayor.

THERE'S ONE WAY TO DO IT

Prospective Vacationist May Pray Earnestly That His Car Will Be Lifted From Curb.

There's a way to do it—to take a vacation trip. Put the old fourwheeler out in easy reach of a car thief. Save some secret identification marks that will insure an early finding in Los Angeles or Palm Beach, then sit at the window and wait.

Deputy City Engineer Schlueter is spending a day or two in Atchison, Kas. This is not a society item. Mr. Schlueter went south to bring back a city of Lincoln car recently stolen from in front of the city hall. The car had been used almost exclusively by him. A little card placed carelessly where any one but a car thief would see it, announced that the city of Lincoln was sole owner of the boat.

The gentleman who took the car, drove up to the Atchison depot and presumably boarded a train to carry him the remainder of his journey. The deputy city engineer was not craving a vacation It is true, however, that some of his co-workers are green with envy They admit that it maybe would be pleasant to have the old car lifted and then go after it provided, of course, some governmental unit could see its way clear to pay for the journey.

WAS A PIONEER RESIDENT

Charles H. Rohman One of the Early Business Men Came to Lincoln in Covered Wagon.

Charles Henry Rohman who died Sunday morning at his home, 1425 L street, was one of the pioneer residents and early business men of Lincoln. As a youth of nineteen he came from Minoc, Ill., in a "prairie schooner" and settled in the town on the Nebraska prairies which a few years before had been made the capital of the state. He never wavered in his allegiance but remained here until his death For forty eight years he was a resident of the city

His first job was as a clerk with the old time firm of J. W. Winger & Co He opened a grocery store in 1884 at 1032 O street and was in business for twelve or thirteen years It was one of the largest stores of its kind and during the more prosperous years enjoyed a large trade

For twenty eight years Mr. Rohman was a commercial traveler For eighteen years he traveled for the Raymond Brothers, Clarke company and for ten years carried a grip in the interest of Allen & Co, Omaha wholesale grocers He retired from active business six or seven years ago He was one of the best known traveling men in the state Mr and Mrs Rohman have lived for thirty five years at 1125 L street.

Charles H Rohman was married to Miss Edith Steiner of Kenton, O., forty eight years ago He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs Gordon Pritchard of New York city; two sons Carl and George of Lincoln, three brothers, Peter of Valparaiso, Frank of Lost Springs, Kas., and Fred of Oklahoma, and three sisters, living at Colorado Springs

Mr. Rohman had not been in good health for several years but his sudden death at 10 o'clock Sunday morning came as a shock to his relatives and friends. He was down town Saturday morning and Saturday night took an automobile ride with members of the family.

STATE HAS STRONG CASE

State Fire Inspector Butcher So Expresses Himself on Court House Fire.

L. J. Butcher, inspector for the state fire marshal, returned from North Platte Monday. He has been working on evidence to present to a grand jury in the matter of the incendiary fire that destroyed the old court house of Lincoln county.

"I think the evidence is pretty well completed," he said, "and there need be no delay when the grand jury is called. The date has not been announced. I think the evidence we have collected presents a very strong case."

The matter of the purchase of about nineteen gallons of oil and gasoline on Sunday, the day before the fire started is said to be one of the matters which the grand jury will inquire into. Recently many persons who knew of facts bearing upon the fire are said to have cooperated willingly with the state and local officers working on the case.

Gets Some Pointers About How to Beat the Railroads and Bus Lines on Fares.

After talking to two sophomores of Princeton university, who were hiking to Denver from New York, County Agent Benjamin L. Montgomery believes he has acquired some pointers on how to get around without paying for it, altho he has no intention of following the tips. Last week he was driving to Emerald and was hailed by two white collar youths who hummed him for a ride. They started from New York City after expressing their suitcases to Chicago, and beat the suitcases there, they claimed They had reached Lincoln, they explained, by bumming auto rides, and had walked a total of five miles, as they estimated it. The lads said they were going to Colorado to work on a ranch for the summer season.

Draft Problem Is Bobbing Up Again

NEW YORK, May 28.—After trying any number of methods to break up the opposition of the leading minor leagues to the draft, the major league club owners probably have found the solution of their problem in the rule prohibiting the transfer of any major league player to a league that will not accept the draft.

Discontent has found its way into the American association and the Toledo and Indianapolis clubs, which are in great need of playing strength, may work up enough support before the end of the season to have the draft restored.

The Toledo and Indianapolis clubs formerly had working agreements with the New York Giants and they obtained many valuable players which John McGraw wanted to send out for development. Under the present conditions McGraw cannot give them a lift, altho he has many players that he would rather have being schooled in the association than on the bench of the champions.

The Pacific Coast league is also hearing complaint from several clubs [illegible], and it seems probable that a big [illegible] will be staged this [illegible].

The Class AA leagues took the stand first that they did not need help from the majors and while it is probable that they can go along for a while it is almost certain that they will eventually have to make a few concessions to build up their clubs with [illegible] players.

ATHLETICS ADDING ZEST TO THE RACE

Connie Mack's Gang Pushing Yanks in American League—Giants Look Like Sure Bet for National Flag.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Thru the sudden and rather unexpected return to life of the Philadelphia Athletics, a "cinch" pennant race in the major leagues has been temporarily, if not permanently avoided.

While the National league has failed to develop a team that looks to have even a small chance of beating the Giants, the American league has jumped to the front with the prospect of a tight contest between the Yanks, the Athletics and possibly one of the western clubs that may get round to expected pre-season form.

Giants Will Be "In."

The Giants have a lead of six and one-half games, and it is being taken for granted that the world champions will be "in" again before the end of the season. The Reds have been a terrible failure, the Cards will be badly crippled by the injury to Rogers Hornsby, and the Pirates good as they seem, will have to act better off the field than recent occurrences in Boston indicate they are acting.

In the American league the Yanks have a lead of four and a half games, but with the Athletics going as they are, that margin is none too great. The Cleveland Indians are having trouble. the Browns will never get any place without George Sisler, and the Tygers are said to have been razzed clear off form by Ty Cobb.

Williams After a Record.

Cy Williams, the tall Philadelphia outfielder, is furnishing one of the features of the seanson in his drive for a new home run record. At the present time Williams has five more homers than Babe Ruth had on May 27 of his record year in 1921. It must be considered, too, that the season started a week later this year than it did in 1921, and that Williams has about forty more games in the band box Philadelphia park.

LINKS AND COYOTES DIVIDE DOUBLE BILL

Coyotes Get On Two Lincoln Pitchers in First Game, While Buck's Clan Mauls Jenny in Second Exhibition.

By John Bentley.

By dividing a double offering Sunday afternoon, Fairbury pulled away from Lincoln with a two out-of-three advantage in the series. The first game Sunday went to the visitors, 7 to 3, but the Links got together behind some excellent pitching by Arthur Stokes and snagged the second engagement, 6 to 1.

George Segrist, Fairbury manager, stuck Hostetter on the mound in the opener. This young righthander hails from New London, Mo., and the brand of bitters he mixed up in the shape of curves and fastballs was somewhat repugnant to the taste of Buck's clan.

VanHoutte Goes In.

Eller started for the Links and he was in trouble most of the time. His support did not warrant many distinguished service medals, however. The Coyotes chased in a run in the first two innings and in the sixth after Eller had walked Goodwin, who scored on Alter's pinch two-bagger, the Lincoln twirler was beckoned to the bench and VanHoutte tried to stem the onslaught. A boot, a wild pitch and three more hits placed three more runs in the Fairbury string before that inning ended.

It was a different story in the second game. Arthur Stokes was right. And in the first three innings the Links got him four runs. It's a good ball club that can beat Art when he's sitting in a joy seat like that.

The only run scored off him was manufactured from mighty sheer material. Patterson, first man up in the third, cracked a single to right and Scott Dye let Kinkel's throw get away from him, Patterson taking second. He went to third on Stout's sacrifice and scored when Tanner dropped Mee's fly.

Two Runners to Third.

Besides Patterson there was but one other Coyote who got to third base and that was Goodwin. He singled and in an effort to catch him napping, Stokes threw wide to McCoy, the Fairbury second baseman getting to the hot corner before the sphere could be retrieved. The score of the two games:

Charles M. Schwab delights in telling the following story of an incident in one of the steel mills under his charge:

"One day while I was passing thru the works I looked out a second story window into the first floor of an adjoining shop and saw a big Irishman sitting on the handles of his wheelbarrow smoking his pipe. I called to him 'What are you doing down there? Why don't you get to work?'

"To which the Irishman replied, 'Well [illegible] me, and who are you, sir?'

"I said, 'I'm the general manager.'

"'Well, young man,' said he, 'you've got a dommed good job; you'd better take care of it.'"—Forbes Magazine.

Some Second Glances.

Lincoln takes on Crete's independent team Monday. They go to Beatrice Tuesday and return to Lincoln for a game with the Blues Wednesday, Memorial day. This game starts at 4 p. m. Then they go back to Beatrice Thursday, to Fairbury Friday and Saturday and return home for a double bill with Fairbury Sunday.

After losing a new hat to Manager George Segrist on the outcome of the first day's game (according to Manager George Segrist) with the Coyotes, Manager Buck Beltzer is inclined to believe the Fairburians were going just a little over their head here. "If not, how have they lost some of the games which are chalked against them?" Buck asked. After watching them in three games, we'll bite. How have they?

"Spider" Baum, who was to the Pacific Coast league for almost two decades what Christy Mathewson was to the National league, is now doing what a great many other retired pastimers do. He's out "ivory" hunting. He looked the Links and Coyotes over Sunday and expects to follow the Links to Beatrice. He didn't come right out and say so, but it's no secret that he wants to see George Stanton in action. "Streamline" hails from the west coast and was tried out by the San Francisco Seals this spring.

Pid Purdy went back to the leftfield wall and snagged Lee's long drive in the third inning of the first game. Pid jarred himself up considerably and play was suspended for several minutes until he got back his bearings. The jar didn't affect his smacksmithing ability, however, as he got three hits out of five chances in the first game and two out of four in the second. And he cut off a runner at home with a perfect throw.

"Mahogany" Bliss, Coyote centerfielder, had a lot of fun trying to knock down his former teammate. Dick Cleveland, who now holds down the warm corner for the Links. Bliss sent two rifle-like drives down Cleveland's way which Dick just had time to reach and grab.

John Stanton has been cut loose from the Links' pitching staff. John comes from Trenton and is a southpaw. His fast fall is good, but he's short in the curve-ball department.

May Play Kansas Game at Landis

The Kansas-Nebraska baseball game, which closes the Husker schedule here Saturday, may be played at Landis field. The university wants to get a big crowd of alumni out for the game and an effort will be made to get the state league park. The Huskers play Kansas at Lawrence, Friday.

To Enter Chicago Games.

The cream of the Nebraska track squad will be taken to Chicago, June 15 and 16, to participate in the nation intercollegiate track and field games. Coach Schulte has not yet decided whom he will take. The Chicago meet brings together the best athletes in the country from all colleges and universities. There is but one classification however.

FINISH NEW ATHLETIC FIELD

York Ready to Book Baseball Games With Independent Clubs.

YORK, Neb., May 28.—A new athletic field has just been completed here. The grandstand will seat five hundred. Peter Schnitzen, manager, is looking for some open dates with state league clubs or fast independent clubs.

ALLIANCE STILL TOPS C. B. & Q. STANDINGS

By defeating Havelock Sunday, 15 to 9, in a game played at Havelock, Alliance maintained its standing at the top of the Burlington league. Plattsmouth won from Lincoln, 3 to 0, and Wymore won from Omaha, 4 to 3.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28.—California's track team, victorious for the third straight time in the intercollegiate track and field championships, was on its way today to Pullman, Wash., to compete in the Pacific coast championships next Saturday.

HORNSBY'S KNEE IN A CAST

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—Rogers Hornsby, star of the St. Louis Cardinals, may be out of the game for weeks with a bad knee. His leg has been placed in a cast and physicians are unable to tell how soon he will recover.

"GATE" FOR TITULAR BATTLE IS ASSURED

Already $400,000 Worth of Orders for Tickets—Gibbons to Start Training at Shelby This Week.

SHELBY, Mont., May 28.—With the arrival of Tommy Gibbons here this week to start his training for his fight with Jack Dempsey on July 4, Shelby will get its first real martial atmosphere.

Work on the arena is progressing rapidly and the advance sale of tickets continue beyond expectations. The promoters estimated today $400,000 worth of orders have been placed on file and that from $5,000 to $10,000 worth are coming in daily.

Feeling that the Dempsey-Gibbons fight is now sure of being a tremendous success in every way, prominent business men of this section are planning to make such an offer for the proposed Dempsey-Wills fight on labor day that no eastern promoters will be able to better it.

Suzanne May Not Play at Wimbledon

PARIS, May 28.—Following a breakdown after she had engaged in three final matches in the world's hard court championships at Saint Cloud yesterday Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen may not be able to defend her championship at Wimbledon.

The French star said today she felt better and that she wanted to play at Wimbledon, but her parents said they would not permit her to.

William M. Johnston, the California star, won the men's singles championship by defeating the Belgian, Jean Wasser, 4-6; 6-2, 6-2, 4-6 and 6-3 in the final round.

Mlle. Lenglen won the women's singles by defeating Miss Kathlene McKane, England, at 6-3 and 6-3.

Miss McKane and Mrs. Beamish, British team, won the doubles from Mlle. Lenglen and Mme. Golding at 6-2 and 6-3, but the French star and M. Cochet won the mixed duobles from Miss McKane and J. C. Gilbert, 6-2 and 10-8.

Do You Think About Money?

Do you find your mind dwelling a great deal upon money, upon the making of money, upon the spending of money? I don't know whether my idea, my policy, my practice regarding this matter is wise or not. However, it has worked out to my satisfaction and is not going to cause any regrets at the close of the chapter. I very early made up my mind how I would act in regard to money making and money spending. I said to myself: "I am going to make all the money I can honestly, and I shall spare no effort to increase my usefulness, and as a corollary, my earning capacity. I am going to spend what I need to spend and spend it neither stingily nor foolishly, but in a rational, sensible way. And then I am going to let it go at that. Whether I build up a fortune rapidly or succeed in saving only slowly, I am not going to worry one iota."

The result was that I rarely let my mind dwell on the subject of money. I found myself becoming more and more interested, as I grew older, in what I could accomplish, in what I could put into the world, and less concerned over how much I could have in return. To make the confession which follows will probably damn me as a business man, but the truth is that I repeatedly forgot to go and draw my salary, and was surprised to find two or three checks handed me by the cashier instead of one check—with the result that the cashier finally hit upon the plan of mailing me my salary weekly! Let me make another confession, also a very unbusinesslike one, I fear: I never kept regular tabs on how much money I had in the bank. I knew, of course, in a general way about how rapidly or slowly I was getting ahead of my expenditures and once in a while I would inquire as to the exact status.

I don't like people who are continually thinking about money and continually talking about money. Money isn't life; money is only a by-product of life. The main thing, as I see it, is to develop your abilities to the fullest extent, apply them day by day with all possible diligence and intelligence, honestly earn as much as you can, spend prudently and, as your circumstances improve, more and more generously and unselfishly; utilize the surplus as profitably as you know how. Then forget the money end of life and devote your mind to useful effort.

And the chances are it will all come out right in the end.—B. C. Forbes, in Forbes Magazine.

Speculative demand for oats was slow and weather and crop reports favorable.

Provisions remained weak thruout the day. Cables were lower.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Heavy liquidation caused grain prices to decline at the opening on the Chicago board of trade today.

Wheat was affected by weaker Liverpool cables and favorable crop reports. Southwestern advices declared the crop was improving following heavy rains. Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, May 28.—Unless drastic constructive factors are developed at once so that an increased buying power by large traders and bull leaders will come come into the market lower prices are likely.

Government regulations have intimidated buyers and foreign grain operators are taking advantage of the situation to make it more favorable to them as the United States and Canada have a surplus of wheat and in Argentine and India they are offering wheat in foreign markets at lower prices.

With a supply and demand situation the governing factors in the markets and no speculative support, values might go very much lower than they should, which would cost the farmers many millions of dollars before the markets had an opportunity to right themselves.—Lamson.

Export Grain Demand.

Export buying has fallen off and there is less of the new crop sold for export than is usual. Foreign stocks are not heavy and buyers abroad are endeavoring to stock up at lower prices. European crop prospects are better than a year ago.

The corn market has acted tired of late, suggesting that bullish conditions had been discounted for the time being.

Corn planting is well advanced and an unusual amount of re-planting will be necessary.

New interest in oats is limited, being affected by the same influences that have depressed values of other grains.—Lamson.

Grain Market Opinions.

Hulburd, Warren & Chandler: On good breaks we would buy wheat for moderate profits.

Bartlett-Frazier & Co.: There appears little hope for higher prices at present.

Harris-Winthrop & Co.: Liquidation continued to the last.

Thomson-McKinnon: There is no indication of an upward movement in wheat. Favorable weather may turn corn distinctly weak.

Logan & Bryan: Buying support appears lacking altho the markets, corn especially, may soon become badly oversold.

Uhlmann Grain Co.: The decline in wheat does not change the situation one bit. We must sell our wheat below Canadian grain before we can hope for permanent improvement.—Lamson.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Realizing on a considerable scale in stock which led last week's recovery was a natural sequence to the abrupt character of the recent rally in many sections of the list. Following a further display of strength at the opening, the tendency to take profits became more pronounced like American Can, California Petroleum, Studebaker and other industrial favorites which had experienced perpendicular bounds of from 7 to 30 points from recent lows.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Sentiment at the start of the week showed a striking recovery from the pessimism prevailing a week ago when the market was under the influence of the recent selling movement.

This renewed cheerfulness primarily resulted from the substantial rally in stock values in the three preceding sessions, which caused speculative opinion to veer completely away from the view that the economic situation was on the threshold of a prolonged reaction. This belief received further impairment from the favorable character of the April railroad statement which appeared over the week-end.

Opening prices: American Sugar 75¾, up ⅝; Studebaker 113¼, up ¾; Sinclair 30⅞, up ¾; U. S. Steel 99⅝, off ⅛; American Woolen 92½; Pennsylvania 44⅝, off ⅛; Cosden 50; Republic Steel 52⅞, up ⅛; Pan-American Petroleum 76; Pan-American "B" 70, up 4; Baldwin 132½; New York central 97⅛; General Motors 15, off ⅛; Marland 47½, up ⅛; Union Pacific 136⅞, up ⅛; American Tel. & T. 122⅝, up⅛.

Stock Market Opinions.

Post & Flagg: We will probably have a good market this morning.

Harris-Winthrop & Co.: The pause in the general business is not serious enough to halt the stock market's upward swing.

Clark-Childs & Co.: Oils and rails look best with equipments next.

Logan & Bryan: Efforts to further reduce short commitments may bring about an extension of enhancement in values.

Thomson-McKinnon: It is likely the recovery will proceed tomorrow.—Lamson.

Wheat, 86,000; corn, 70,000; oats, 145,000; rye, 25,000.—Lamson.

History by Legislation.

The New York senate, by a heavy majority, has passed a bill specifying the manner in which the Declaration of Iindependence, the events leading up to the Revolutionary war, the military history of that war and the personal character of the Revolutionary patriots must be treated in textbooks to be used in the state. That is a beginning. Next we shall have laws fixing the characters of the early presidents and justifying the Mexican war. Then our legislatures will give us the literally inspired history of the World war, in which, single handed almost, we overthrow the might of the central empires. We shall have Roosevelt or Wilson a demigod, according to the complexion of the legislature. Each political overturn will be celebrated by a state wide bonfire of the history textbooks of the defeated party. The teachers who had laboriously printed a republican version of history on the minds of the children will have to print a democratic version on top of it, only to put the same tables of the mind thru a third printing when the republicans come back.—The New Republic.

A Fairy Tale.

Six-year-old Mary awoke about 2 o'clock in the morning. "Tell me a story, mamma," she pleaded. "Hush, darling," said her mother, "daddy will be in soon and tell us both one."—Atlanta Constitution.

MEN AND THINGS

Next to the delusion entertained that if a group of men can get a million dollars' worth of stock subscribed the success of their enterprise is assured is that which imagines that because a man happens to be in business he is making money. Business failures in March numbered 1,689 compared with 1,539 in February and 2,390 in March the year before. The liabilities of the failed concerns were forty nine millions compared with thirty-nine millions the month before and sixty five millions a year ago. At that rate about 20,000 enterprises fail every year. This does not include those who sell out before they have exhausted all their capital. The difference between failure and success is so small that the wonder is so many men take such a chance with their capital.

The sugar boycott that took the form of resolutions by women's clubs not to use any more than the members could possibly help appears to have fallen flat. The official bulletin of the sugar trade says that the retailers report that the boycott has had little effect upon the trade. By the way, you might be interested in knowing that the sugar authorities say that the present high prices are due to the low prices of 1921, when they say sugar was selling below the cost of production. This discouraged planting last year, and not only was the Cuban crop short 400,000 tons, but the beet production was nearly as greatly reduced. Today's high prices are inducing a large amount of planting and this, we are told, will mean lower prices when the new crop is garnered, beginning next September.

Every time we try to apply what we learned in the school books about the operation of the law of supply and demand to conditions we get all mixed up. The organ of the sugar trade says that the stock of sugar on hand in the refineries is larger right now than usual at this time of the year, and that buying is restricted to enough to fill orders. Yet the price remains high. The reason assigned is that the holders believe that the cold weather has held back business and that if they wait till consumption demands increase they will get the price they want. The refiners are also disinclined to sell right now because most of them bought raw stuff on the advanced market.

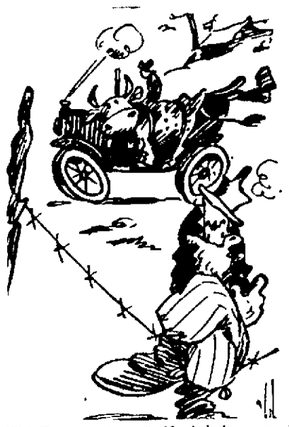

A Lincoln man who drove past the Bancroft school the other evening was reminded that once upon a time a great roar went up because the existing school board spent $100,000 for that building, and that it cost two members a reelection. * * * The recent actions of the well known Mr. Pluvius not only benefited the farmers, but a lot of automobile owners. Just imagine 250,000 cars, only a small proportion of which have been operating for the better part of a week, and see what the rains have been worth to their owners' * * * Speaking of good investments, how would you like to have a lot of money tied up in a stock of straw hats?

It must be great sport to be a German merchant these days. Every day the value of the mark falls, and this means that the prices of goods rise in proportion. The fact, however, that it is impossible to jack up wages every day puts the burden of the whole system on the backs of labor. American workmen should make a note of this fact. We have a great many theories about money, some of them fanciful and most of them unsound. One of them is that prosperity can be assured by having plenty of money in circulation. Folly, of course, and somebody must bear the expense.

Frankly we don't believe the statement of the Chicago Daily News, reliable as has been its reputation, when it says that in every flat and apartment in that city is a buyer or seller of booze. Think what an indictment that is of the citizenry of that metropolis! We hear a lot about men who never cared for liquor before as regular purchasers now that the law has said that they cannot have it. It isn't true, as your own observation will prove to you. I know that not one of the men with whom I am on fairly familiar terms and who cared nothing for liquor before prohibition came is now a bootlegger's patron. Wet propaganda is being widespread. This News stuff was cut off the same cloth.

What's the measure of a man's intelligence? Is is the amount of knowledge that he has acquired from books, information of a technical or special character, or the other what nots of a college career and education? Of course it is not. Then why do some of our college bred men who have been out in the world long enough to discover that the true measure is what a man has accomplished and is accomplishing and not the writing on his degree want to set themselves up as a superior class. We poke fun at the men and women who make possible our Greenwich villages for their assumption of being in possession of all wisdom, but they are not the only ones suffering from the same delusion.

BRAIN TESTS

(By Sam Loyd)

Ten Minutes to Answer This.

Here is a problem culled from the notes of two gentlemen of leisure, returned from their summer's outing. Weary Willie, who had out-stayed his welcome at Joytown, started for Pleasantville simultaneously with the departure of Dusty Rhodes from Pleasantville. They met and exchanged the fraternal grip at a point where Willie had gone eighteen miles farther than Dusty. After an affectionate parting it took Willie thirteen and a half hours to reach Pleasantville, and Dusty twenty-four hours to get to Joytown. How far was it from Pleasantville to Joytown?
